

Great Slaughter of Prices

Winter Goods Must be Closed Out.

We are putting out all our suits and overcoats, at a big reduction during this sale. You will find our net prices far below the prices of others on the same goods, notwithstanding the big discounts offered by some. The size of the discount does not mean anything to the purchaser; it is the net price that determines whether an article is a bargain.

- Ladies' Waists and Wrappers at a reduction.
- Ladies' Capes and Furs greatly reduced in price.
- Flannelettes and French Flannels at cut prices.
- Comforts also at reduced prices.

A MATTER OF TASTE.

Anthony Hope's fascinating story, adapted to stage uses, came to Pendleton, and played to a small house. The company was at least of average strength, and gave a production that brought out many of the best ideas of the author. Vaudeville receives better patronage here in Pendleton than elsewhere in the hands of actors of whom hundreds are out on a job. And these two facts furnish a strange comment upon the taste of a majority of the people in the selection of amusements. It cannot be pleaded that the company was unknown. No better known are many of the vaudeville companies that visit Pendleton. It is simply a matter of taste. "Rust of Hentsau," from the pen of Anthony Hope, is acknowledged to be a literary gem, and, when adapted to the stage, is one of the greatest of modern plays. It seems reasonable to expect that its literary flavor would attract people. Yet it did not attract a good sized house, and that is discouraging to the management of the local theater. Let it be said no more that Pendleton gets no good things in its theater. When the good things come they do not receive patronage such as to justify others to seek this town. The theater managers cannot supply taste in matters theatrical. They can only offer to please good taste when opportunity affords, and when their efforts receive such return as those of Tuesday night. It need be no surprise if they lead the theatrical people here in the future on nothing but cheap vaudeville. Apparently, that is the sort of stage fodder they want.

AGITATION GOES GOOD.

Whatever may be the decision of the bacteriologist as to the nature of the disease that has caused losses by swine raisers, the publicity given to the matter will result in good to the industry. It will make for better methods of keeping and breeding hogs, and will cause attention to be directed thereto. Opinions differ regarding the exact definition of the malady. However, there is a malady, and whatever it be, it should be made to produce as little loss as possible. Let specimens be sent to Dr. Pernot, state bacteriologist at Corvallis, and his return will satisfy all reasonable persons. It is one of the functions of his position at the state agricultural college to make microscopic examination in all cases, and to pronounce upon the character of the disease that carry off Oregon livestock.

HARD ON ROOSEVELT.

Rear-Admiral Schley's appeal to the commander in chief of the army and navy makes it exceedingly embarrassing for the president. By it, he is compelled to pass upon the question already settled so far as a majority of the court of inquiry could settle it, and later endorsed by the secretary of the navy. For the president to add his endorsement to those of the secretary would be to relegate

Schley to a position of defeat after three attempts at securing justice. To overrule the majority's opinion, would be to rebuke them and also to rebuke the head of the naval portfolio. It is easy to see that Mr. Roosevelt is between two fires, with an enflaming coming from the side of the people. Just at this juncture, it would be troublesome to trade-hits with the chief executive. And everyone is curious to learn how he will emerge from the dilemma.

THE TRUST PROBLEM.

The Tribune prints this morning the views of the editors of a number of papers, mostly published in the central western states concerning the proper methods of dealing with the trust question, with special reference to what President Roosevelt had to say on that subject in his Minneapolis speech. These views are of peculiar interest, because they undoubtedly express the sentiments of the constituents of those who gave them. The opinions entertained by these editors naturally differ somewhat in details, but they are all marked by a tone of moderation and conservatism. The serious nature of the trust problem is recognized and the necessity of taking it in hand is conceded. But there is a gratifying absence of passion. There is no present to desperate remedies. It is evident that the subject has been studied pretty thoroughly during the last few years, and is taken up now in a more sober and deliberate manner than it was a few years ago, when every aggregation of capital, in whatever form and for whatever purpose, was so furiously denounced.

Many of the republican editors favor the adoption of an amendment to the constitution giving to congress full power over the trusts. Others do not seem to think that such an amendment is necessary and are inclined to believe that congress possesses the power to enact legislation adequate to curb the monopolies. The efficacy of state legislation is doubted by many. Nearly all are united in the belief that President Roosevelt has "sounded a keynote" in his Minneapolis speech.

These representative men are not enemies of capital, nor are they enemies of corporations. They have come to understand that they are a necessary part of the new order of things. The men are perfectly willing that corporations should have a fair profit on capital actually invested, but they are opposed to excessive dividends on an inflated capitalization. They are opposed also to the frauds on investors of which the promoters of so many trusts are guilty. They desire for the public the protection which publicity and supervision of industrial enterprises will give it. It is evident that the people are going to insist on congress taking up this trust question and settling it, and they will require that the subject be attended to calmly and judiciously, with that caution and conservatism which the consideration of such a great question demands.—Chicago Tribune.

CREDIT TO RUSSIA.

A Paris telegram says: Russia, and not Great Britain, according to the French foreign office, deserves the credit for preventing joint European intervention in behalf of Spain just prior to the war with the United States. It is added that Russia blocked the movement when Spain herself was taking the initiative, and hence the czar showed greater friendship to the United States than did Great Britain when that country later rejected the Austrian proposal.

Subsequently, after General Woodford's conference with the Spanish premier and Sedor Gullon, the foreign minister, at which the latter indeicated the extent of the surrender Spain was willing to make to the demands of the United States, the Austrian government instructed its ambassadors to propose to the European governments that a note be presented to Washington urging the United States to accept Spain's offer and avert war.

The Spanish ambassador in London saw A. J. Balfour, acting as secretary of state for foreign affairs during the absence of Lord Salisbury at Beaulieu, France, and Mr. Balfour, it is stated, promised to instruct Lord Lansdowne to act alone or with his colleagues, with a view of maintaining peace. No action was definitely agreed on, though Russia, France and Germany were disposed toward a movement which would avert an outbreak of hostilities.

A few days before the war, however, it is declared, Mr. Balfour raised the objection to which Lord Cranborne alluded in the house of commons today, "against any note which would have the appearance of putting pressure on the United States or offering an opinion on the United States' attitude." The Austrian proposition then fell through.

The statement of a prominent British foreign office official regarding the alleged support by France of the Austrian proposal is declared to be incorrect. France, it is asserted, did not back up the proposal, and the French ambassador in London confined himself to making an inquiry as to what view the British government took of the matter.

France's attitude throughout, it is added, was friendly to the United States as well as to Spain, her ardent desire being to avert war. She took no initiative in any suggestion tending to put pressure on the United States, nor at any time encouraged Spain to resistance. Her influence in the four parlors of the powers was always directed towards making peace.

The exact value which should be placed on Great Britain's leaning toward the United States can be gauged, it is asserted in conclusion, by the fact that when war was declared Sodor Gullon was furious, firstly against Germany, secondly against Russia and thirdly against Great Britain. His resentment against Germany was due to the latter having encouraged Spain to resist, and then abandoned her at the last moment.

The Portland grain fleet is well making a fine record for outward voyages and if the ships sailing in the next three months make as good a record as those sailing earlier in the season the season will be a record-breaker for speedy trips around the Horn.

A PRISONER FOR LIFE

Offences against the laws of health are punished rigorously and inevitably by nature. A man may break civil laws and escape punishment, but the man who transgresses nature's law of health cannot escape the penalty. Many a man is today a prisoner for life, and for a very brief life, because of his outrage of the laws upon which health is conditional. He sits idly in his chair torn by coughing spells and gasping for breath. A handkerchief which wipes his lip shows a red stain. He is slowly wasting away. Weak lungs, obstinate coughs, spitting of blood, weakness and emaciation are cured by the use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. Thousands who have been cured by this medicine attest the fact. Sick people are invited to consult Dr. Pierce by letter, free. All correspondence is held as strictly private and secretly confidential. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y. Accept no substitute for "Golden Medical Discovery." The sole motive for substitution is to enable the dealer to make the little more profit paid on the sale of less meritorious medicines. "Three years ago I had the grip," writes Mrs. Tillie Linsey of Gravel Switch, Marion Co., Kentucky. "It settled on my lungs, and the doctor said I had consumption. I took six bottles of 'Golden Medical Discovery,' and am thankful to say I am entirely well. You may print this letter if you see fit to do so." Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets keep the bowels in healthy activity.

Told by Pain

If you have pains you should look after them quickly. Pain shows something is wrong. The sharper the pain the more danger there is in delay. There are thousands of women to-day who are bearing awful pain almost continually, rather than tell a physician about the shooting pains in their lower abdomen, about the agony of falling of the womb and the distress of leucorrhoea. They let the months pass and their trouble becomes harder to cure and more distressing. But modest women can secure exemption from the embarrassment of a private examination. When pain tells them of danger they can cure themselves by the use of in the privacy of their homes. You can be cured without distressing publicity. With these facts before you there is no reason for the delay which is increasing your misery and wasting the days of your life. Why not stop the pain today?

WINE OF CARDUI

Beien, Miss., March 9, 1900.

I have used one bottle of Wine of Cardui and one package of Theodor's Black-Draught. Before I began to take your medicines I had pains in my back, hips, lower bowels and my arms. Sometimes I thought I would go blind. My head ached and I was so weak I could hardly walk across the floor. Now I can only feel a little of the pain in my side and I am going to use your medicines until I get cured, for I believe they will certainly cure me. I have been married twelve years and am the mother of seven children. I thank you for your wonderful medicine and what it has done for me. MATILDA SMITH.
