Equal to the Emergency.
 An Irishman who was out of work went on board a vessel that was in the harbor and asked the captain if he could find him work on the ship.
 "Well," said the captain, at the same time handing the Irishman a piece of rope, "if you can find three ends to that rope you shall have some work."
 The Irishman got hold of one end of the rope, and, showing it to the captain, said: "That's one end, your honor." Then he took hold of the other end, and showing it to the captain as before, said: "And that's two ends, your honor." Then, taking hold of both ends of the rope, he threw it overboard saying: "And, faith, there's an end to the rope, your honor!"
 He was engaged.—Tim Bits.

Couldn't Kill This Cat.
 This is the sort of story some people tell: The insurance agent was removed up the country to a higher berth; everything was arranged for the removal except the cat. His wife, not wishing to take the animal with them, was quite at a loss what to do; she would not give her away, being afraid the animal would not have a good home. At last she decided to have her destroyed. When the good lady's husband returned in the evening he fastened a brick round the cat's neck and put her into a bucket of water. When he went to take her out next morning to bury her, much to his surprise the cat was still alive; she had drunk of the water and was sitting on the brick!
