E. D. BOYD'S VIEWS A NEW FIRM HERE

PLANNING TO 1902
 DEMOCRATIC CAMPAIGN.

What the State Convention Talked of While Conferring in Portland.

Colonel E. D. Boyd, member of the democratic state central committee for Umatilla county, was asked to outline the work of the recent conference in Portland, and submits the following:
 The occasion of the meeting of the democratic state central committee, at Portland, on April 30, gave rise to a conference with other members of the party, who assembled at the same time and place. Representative democrats were gathered there from nearly every section of the state, to the number of about 50 (including the members of the central committee), some of whom had at one time been republicans and some had been numbered with the populists, but since the demise of that party, have returned to the democratic fold, believing the only hope of the people is in the democratic party, as the republican party is now dominated by the trusts and combines.

All were enthusiastic and practically unanimous upon the main issues discussed. It was urged that the platform of the party adopted by the convention, should be brief; that the tariff should be made the main issue, as it was used as a means of oppression of the people in enabling the trusts and combines to build up enormously rich monopolies in all protected commodities, by unduly increasing the cost thereof to the consumers. It was pointed out that legislation was nearly all controlled by these monied classes and the interests of the people ignored, especially in the proposed legislation as to the Philippine tariff, which is a direct blow at the developing commerce of the Pacific Coast.

Railroad combinations, which tend to discourage competition, next received attention, as this was viewed as another means of warring against the interests of producers and the industrial classes.

The ship subsidy was pointed out as a method of favoring the wealthy ship-owners and builders at the expense of the people, without just reason. That the legislation now proposed in congress, with any prospect of success, is practically all in the interest of monied monopolies, and against those of the people, and, if continued, would precipitate a war of the classes against the masses, which is now beginning. This is a critical condition, and must be placed before the people in no doubtful terms, that they may take steps to ward off these impending evils before it is too late. Only live issues should be embodied in the platform, such as are vital to the interests of the people at this time.

It was also recommended that a candidate for United States senator should be nominated to be voted for at the next session of the legislature, as in accord with the avowed policy of the democratic party favoring the selection of United States senators by direct vote of the people; that the very best men, in every county and district should be nominated for the legislature, who will faithfully serve and not disgrace the state, as has been done in some former legislatures. The legislative tickets were regarded as more important than all others, that were to be nominated by the various counties.

If these suggestions are heeded it was agreed that the democratic party could confidently appeal to the suffrages of the people.

It was observed that the conference was composed of earnest, intelligent and active leaders and it is thought much good will result.

With the right men for the state ticket, it was thought the party might hope for a measure of success. No names were suggested by the committee to the state convention, but in private conversation, George Chamberlain, of Portland, was the only one mentioned for governor, so it would seem that the nomination points that way.
