JUDGE ELLIS' ORDER

HE RENDERS DECISION
IN MARSHALSHIP SCRAP.

Orders Heathman and Beam to Vacate and Turn the Offices of Marshal and Recorder Over to Their Successors, Blakley and McCourt. Pendleton has a new marshal and a new recorder.

At least, this was the decision of Judge Ellis at 11 o'clock this forenoon, who sustained the demurrer to the answer of Heathman and Beam's attorneys, which was filed Saturday, in answer to the decision in the mandamus case, and he has signed the order for the old officers to step down and out, and give up the offices with their emoluments, to Blakley and McCourt, and unless this order is complied with at once Heathman and Beam will be in contempt of court.

This ruling was expected, even by the Heathman-Beam faction, for during the last few days they had almost given up hopes of winning out before Judge Ellis, but immediately after the judge gave out his decision, J. J. Balleray, one of the attorneys for Heathman and Beam, announced that an appeal would be taken.

The people of Pendleton were in hopes that today would end the scrap which is becoming obnoxious to all, and is a detriment to the best interests of the city, but such is not the case. The fight has been on since the first meeting night in January, when the new council appointed Marshal Heathman and Recorder Beam to succeed themselves, but the appointment was not sustained by the new Mayor, T. G. Hailey. Mayor Hailey had been investigating the running of the police department of Pendleton and had come to the conclusion that there was something irregular in the way things were going. The charge was made and acknowledged by Heathman that he had taken money from the gamblers and others in excess of his salary and the fines imposed by the city. Recorder Beam had acknowledged to taking a part of this money for his "rake off" and it was for this reason that Mayor Hailey thought it was time for a change, and he would not consent to the reappointment of them to their old places. He, therefore, appointed Councilmen Johnson, Somerville and Frasier a committee to investigate the charges and make a report. After two weeks of deliberation and a thorough investigation, this committee reported that the charges were found true, but they did not recommend any course to be taken. That was on Saturday night, the 11th of January, at a special meeting of the council and after the report, a resolution was passed for the election of new men to succeed Heathman and Beam. William Lane and L. G. Frazier were nominated, and when it came to a vote the councilmen lined up with four on a side. Mayor Hailey then broke the tie by casting his vote for the new men and declaring them duly elected. Lane qualified but Frazier declined the office. Monday morning following Heathman and Beam, through their attorneys, Stillman & Pierce, filed an injunction against Mayor Hailey, the four councilmen who voted with him and Lane and Frazier from acting in the capacity of the offices elected to, and the mayor and council from attempting to have them serve. After being in court for several weeks Judge Ellis dissolved the injunction against the mayor and councilmen, but sustained it against Lane and Frazier. The council finding that Lane was not eligible to the office dropped him and last Wednesday night elected Joe Blakley and John McCourt to succeed Heathman and Beam. The Heathman-Beam side, anticipating such a move, had their papers ready to file another injunction against the new men and they called up the county clerk and had the papers filed that night. Early Thursday morning Blakley and McCourt filed mandamus proceedings to force Heathman and Beam to vacate the offices. These suits have occupied the attention of the court ever since. The injunction was dissolved, the mandamus sustained, and the answer of Heathman and Beam's attorneys overruled so now the only thing left is for the old officers to appeal to the supreme court of the state of Oregon, which convenes in Pendleton in May.

Immediately after overruling the demurrer in the mandamus case, the judge signed an order, asking the old officers to vacate, and it was placed in the sheriff's hands and served just before noon today. If they do not vacate they will be guilty of contempt of court.

Heathman says he has had enough of the fight and has given up his star to Blakley, who is now in full possession of the office of marshal. Beam has not been served with the writ for the reason that he has not been found. He has filed his intention of appealing, but McCourt is in possession of the recorder's office and will serve in that capacity.
