What It Is.

Advertising is the life blood of the business world today, and well directed advertising is like the powerful searchlight of a river steamer, thrown upon a distant cottage on the bank, cutting it out like a picture painted on a black canvas. The timid buyer and the prospective industry will follow the rays of the searchlight of publicity, just as surely as will the eyes of the steamer's passengers follow the light thrown from their vessel. They will not search the surrounding gloom for objects of interest when a beautiful picture is clearly shown before them. Prospective buyers will not search the surrounding gloom for your competitors if the searchlight of publicity is turned on your own place of business.—Canastota (N. Y.) Bee.

Advertising.

We may live without poetry, music and art,
We may live without conscience and live without heart;
We may live without friends, and live without fads,
But business today cannot live without ads.

Not Subject to Insanity.

A well-known citizen whose head is nearly as bald as a billiard-ball and begins to look like a glorified ostrich egg, was being joked by a friend in Portland, says the Oregonian, in regard to the loss of his capillary adornment and advised to cut off a flowing beard and paste it on his scalp. He took the guying good naturedly, and stated that he was in a measure consoled for the loss of hair by the knowledge that this exempted him from any danger of ever losing his mind. When asked how that was, he said that no baldheaded man ever went insane, and that no man without his hair was ever found in a lunatic asylum. His friend could not contradict the assertion, as he had no knowledge in the matter, but he was inclined to doubt the assertion.
