must know best that they can have implicit confidence in the true worth of every pair—that they are just as we represent them to be—that we adjust any reasonable dissatisfaction—that our shoes are invariably better for the money than can be found elsewhere.

FOUGHT HIS IMAGE.

Game Cock in St. Louis Makes a Fool of Himself.

One of the gamiest gamecocks in St. Louis, Mo., gave a chance audience a rare treat one day last week. He fought his image to a finish. By chance a mirror had been left in the back yard at the corner of Jefferson avenue and Pine street. The cock was strutting about the yard looking for trouble when suddenly he came face to face with his image in the glass. His fighting blood was up. At last he had met a bird that he considered worthy of his prowess. He eyed the supposed enemy critically. His anger grew as the image mocked him. The feathers began to rise on his neck, and in an

FIGHTING WITH HIMSELF.

Instant he made a lunge at the glass. Picking himself up from the ground, where he had been doubled in a heap, he backed off a few paces. The cowardly image also backed away and mocked him. He made lunge after lunge at the glass, each time backing away thoroughly surprised. Finally he got tired of retreating and made a fierce face to face contest with himself. He fought until he fell from sheer exhaustion.

The Senate's Blind Chaplain.

The senate's blind chaplain, the Rev. Dr. W. H. Milburn, is a survival of Washington before the war. It was in 1845 that he was elected chaplain of congress. Representative Abraham Lincoln, of Illinois, nominated him. That was 10 years before John Sherman and Justin S. Morrill took their seats in the house. "In those days," says Dr. Milburn, "one chaplain offered the prayer at the opening of each branch of congress, and the only way this could be done by one man was to have the senate clock kept 10 minutes slower than the house clock. After offering the invocation in the house a page would take me to the senate chamber, where I performed a similar duty."

Will Receive the Money.

The conviction and sentencing of George Levy at Boise City will bring up for adjustment and payment the reward offered by the heirs, and the state for the arrest and conviction of the murderer. The reward amounts to $4100, the $1000 offered by the state being payable upon the arrest and conviction of the murderer. The $3000 offered by the Davis Levy heirs is not payable until conviction of the murderer has been affirmed by the higher court. The reward is payable to Chief of Police Francis and Deputy Sheriff Rabinson, of Boise City, to whose efforts are due the capture of the murderer.
