FIGHT IN MARION

GEER AND SIMON FORCES WORKING TOGETHER.

Furnish's Victory in Umatilla Pleases Both Anti-Simon-Geer Crowd as Well as the Geer Faction—Know Now Whom They Have to Consider.

The Salem correspondent of the Oregonian, writing of politics in Marion county, says:
Governor Geer is much stronger in this county than is Simon, and without the aid of Geer's friends Simon would have no possible chance of landing a legislative delegation. Whether this added strength will enable him to do so remains to be seen on March 26, when the county convention will be held. The first great battle will take place Friday, March 14, but, owing to the local complications, there will be another contest before the convention meets. The fight in the primaries promises to be nominally a Geer and an anti-Geer contest. But when the delegates to the county convention have been named, an effort will begin to capture the convention organization for Joseph Simon. The reason for this plan of campaign is plain.

Geer People Deny Simon.

The Geer people vigorously deny that any combination exists between Simon and Geer, and denounce the allegation as a malicious lie, without any foundation in fact. The issue thus raised is the leading factor in the present fight, though there are also anti-Geer men who would be such even though the senatorial question did not enter into the controversy. On the other hand, there are men of considerable political sagacity who are primarily Simon men, and if they had to choose between Simon and Geer would remain loyal to Simon. All the Simon men are supporting Geer. In some of the precincts it is said that the fight has ceased to be a contest over Geer, but has become a fight over Simon. This is the situation at Woodburn, where both slates will be favorable to Geer, but only the Poorman slate favorable to Simon. Poorman is making a very lively contest for the support of his own precinct for return to the legislature, and is being opposed by people led by W. L. Toozee and J. H. Settlemier.

A Large Quiet Vote.

It is a foregone conclusion that neither faction will have a solid delegation to the state convention. Neither of the two opposing leaders—Croison, on the part of the Simon-Geer people, and Wrightman on the part of anti-Simon-Geer forces—pretends to claim a solid delegation. Each is striving for a majority in the convention, and the larger the majority the better. There will be a large "quiet vote" by men who do not announce which way their choice will go. The quiet vote is something that is poor foundation for estimates. The popular vote might be very evenly divided, and yet one faction have a decided majority in the convention.

Furnish's Victory in Umatilla.

The victory of Furnish in Umatilla county was a source of great satisfaction to the anti-Simon-Geer crowd, and they were as free in expressing their pleasure as were the Geer people when the Simon-Moody people won in Wasco. The Geer people also claim to be pleased over the result of the Umatilla primary election. They say that it is now settled that Furnish will be Geer's chief opponent for the nomination, and they are glad to have the fight made certain to this extent. One of the anti, on hearing this view expressed said: "Yes, but their satisfaction is like that of a sheep owner of my acquaintance. One of his sheep died and the other said: 'Lord, thy will be done; it is all right.' One after another of the sheep died, and the owner made the same comment, until he beheld the dead carcass of the last one of the flock. Then he said: 'This may be all right, but I can't see it that way.' If too many counties go for Furnish, it may still be all right, but the Geer people won't see it that way."

Created No Surprise.

Neither the Wasco nor the Umatilla primary elections created any surprise here, except that Furnish secured a much larger proportion of the delegation than was expected. It was generally supposed that each would carry his own county, and it is expected that Geer will carry Marion. The fight here is materially different, however, for state delegates are chosen by precincts, and even a large majority cannot give one man a solid delegation to the state convention. In Marion the fight, is also made un-
