FRUIT MAY BE INJURED.

Pleasant Weather Starting the Trees and Buds Which Frost May Kill.

Will there be more cold weather that will effect the fruit buds? is the question that the horticulturists are asking each other but all are slow in making any predictions either way. It is admitted that the buds are starting very early this year—several weeks earlier than is usual—but it is earnestly hoped that the weather will be favorable and that the people of Pendleton and Umatilla county will not be compelled to send out of the country for fruit for next season.

Trees are budding all over the country and if the present weather keeps up it will only be a few weeks until the trees, as well as the grasses, will be putting on their summer coats and summer will be here in earnest.

While it is impossible to tell yet what kind of a fruit crop will be in this country, the orchardists are feeling somewhat uneasy about the outcome. In speaking of this one horticulturist said today:

"It is too early yet to make any predictions as to what kind of a fruit crop we will have, but if nothing happens from now on there is no reason to believe that there will not be plenty of all kinds in most sections of the county. Of course, in places, peaches and cherries have been injured, but this does not reach all over this section and while some orchards will be short of these fruits others will have good yields. The prospects are as good as usual for apples but the buds are swelling considerably already and it is quite early for this. Should a cold snap or hard frost come now it would be of more injury to the fruit than later for when the trees just begin to bud they are easiest killed. After the trees are in full bloom or the fruit is formed it will take a harder freeze or more cold to effect them than it does when the buds are just beginning to swell."

Already orchardists are getting themselves ready for the spraying season and it is expected a more strenuous effort will be made this season to rid the trees of the worms that infest the apples than ever before. Last year's apple crop was not up to the standard of excellence because of the worms that infested so large a per cent of them, and although there is a law to enforce every man to spray, this is something that is not done generally. It should be, however, and every effort should be made to keep the fruit, as well as the trees, free from disease.

RECOVERED FROM INJURIES.

George Spere, Fireman, in Town Visiting Friends—Just From Hospital.

George Spere and wife are in the city visiting friends. Mr. Spere was fireman on the work train that was wrecked one mile east of The Dalles the 13th of September, and has just got out of the hospital in Portland, having not yet entirely recovered from the burns received about the face. The train wrecked was a double-header gravel train, which ran into a bank of sand that had been piled on the track by the wind and both engines were thrown from the track, with the result that two engineers, Tom Harland and Ed Rees, were instantly killed, and Mr. Spere was so badly burned that it was thought he would die. After the accident he walked almost all the way to The Dalles, where he could get relief from his suffering. Mr. Spere had only been working for the O. R. & N. Company 13 hours when the accident occurred, having come from Montana, where he had been working on the Short Line, just a few days before going to work for the O. R. & N. George Spere is a son of J. J. Spere, a well known Umatilla county farmer, and has many relatives and friends hereabouts who are glad to see him out and around once more.

DR. BINGHAM LECTURES.

Delivers an Interesting Address at Whitman College.

Before the friends and students of Whitman college Monday, says the Union, Dr. J. E. Bingham, of this city, read an exceptionally well prepared paper on "The Profession of Medicine." Dr. Bingham's paper was one of the regular series of "The Choosing of a Life Work," work lectures, which were instituted by the Whitman faculty last fall and which have been given on various professions from time to time. In part Dr. Bingham said:

"Surgery and medicine may be pleasant pastimes as studies but the practicing of them is a very serious business. When the student of medicine once reaches a point in his career where he fully appreciates his responsibilities in life he is very apt to wish he had chosen some other occupation. He may, after completing his studies abandon the profession, as did a well known American author who gave in his reason that in studying the statistics and mortality reports he found that each doctor of medicine who practiced his profession for any average length of time lost 1500 patients. He said he had concluded to let his 1500 live and so took up journalism.

"Lawyers are not apt to pose before the public as saving life when they address juries and judges in the defense of prisoners accused of murder.

They are applauded and praised on all sides for their efforts in this direction, even when their clients deserve the severest punishment that the law inflicts. There is a humil sentimentality about such praise that does not appeal to the medical man—at least not in a way which is as convincing as the sheriff's subpoena. Mr. Attorney addresses himself to a jury of his countrymen in the selection of whom the strictest impartiality is shown. Whatever defects of character they possess, in this respect they must be unimpeachable. They must be totally ignorant of the merits or facts of the case, or as one of our western statesmen puts it, "They must know nothin' about nothin'." Should our legal Demosthenes fail to convince the jury, the Judge may set aside the findings and grant a new trial, or the supreme court may find that something was called by a wrong name and set the man free, and if these fail an appeal to the governor may still be successful. No matter what mistake our legal friend may make there is still a chance for his client. But it is different in the sick room, where a man's life depends upon the decision and acts of his physician, who, if he makes a serious error, cannot get the penalty set aside. From the decision of his jury there is no appeal."

Good Advertising Matter.

One of the homeseekers recently arriving from the east told the Walla Walla Union reporter that to reach the heart of the homeseekers the homeseekers the daily papers of this section should be sent him. He continued:

"Copies of Walla Walla papers sent to different sections of the east and middle west would do more to bring settlers to this section than all the advertising matter of the folder variety that could be scattered. While the people in the land from which these settlers must come are better posted now than they were a few years ago as to the advantages in educational lines possessed by the northwest, there is nothing which tells the standing of a community as well as the newspapers which is printed and through them is the proper manner of advertising."
