Practically Starving.

"After using a few bottles of Kodol Dyspepsia Cure my wife received perfect and permanent relief from a severe and chronic case of stomach trouble," says J. R. Holly, real estate, insurance and loan agent, of Macomb, Ill. "Before using Kodol Dyspepsia Cure she could not eat an ordinary meal without intense suffering. She is now entirely cured. Several physicians and many remedies had failed to give relief." You don't have to diet. Eat any good food you want, but don't overload the stomach. Kodol Dyspepsia Cure will always digest it for you. Tallman & Co. & Brock & McComas.

WOMAN'S WORLD

FABRICS OF SPRING AND SUMMER FROCKS

White has continued in favor until it has reached the zenith of its glory; a new idea which favors stout women.

New York, March 17.—When the dances and receptions are resumed after Easter for the brief season that and the time to take up the exodus to the summer resorts, the most notable feature of the fashions will be the absence of the carnival of color which usually prevails after Easter Sunday. The fabrics employed in developing spring and summer frocks are so light in tint as well as in texture that they come, very fittingly, under a general head of "pastel" creams.

Black, of course is not to be excluded under any conditions, for upon it the couturieres depend for the smartening touch upon spring frocks. Red, too, escapes the list of discarded colors, and those who have bemoaned the fact that we must presently part with the rare rich shades which have been so handsome a feature of winter wardrobes will be pleased to see the tint in a number of materials, considerably toned down, though with plentifully distributions of white.

White has constantly increased in favor until it has reached the zenith of its glory. Even the stout woman, who years ago, and not so very many either, looked with abhorrence upon an all white gown finds nothing so well suited to her purpose of dress as a white dress built of highly finished satin cloth. The stout woman has one advantage this season that has not hitherto been presented and that is the yoke effect in skirt trimmings. This, by the way, is an idea which will find favor in all kinds of skirts, as it serves the purpose so well of a close-fitting effect around the hips. The slender woman adores it because it affords an unbroken outline of the contour and lends grace to the figure.

The yoke may be of lace, tucking or shirring, as is most suitable for the material. But the figure inclined to obesity has its best effect in a yoke of the dress material stitched down closely with several rows of stitching.

A very charming afternoon gown had the skirt made in this way over a lining of white taffeta. The foundation was not made independent of the outer skirt and excepting the yoke there was no other trimming on the skirt.

The jacket was a sort of cross between an Eton and a bodice, fitting closely into the waistline and blousing perceptibly at the front. The seams were stitched with narrow bands of white silk braid and falling below the waistline at the back are two oblong flaps simulating a postilion effect. The flaps were trimmed with the silk braid and a few tiny black silk buttons.

The jacket opened over a smart little vest of white taffeta over white plaited chiffon. There were also inner lapels of taffeta embroidered in delicate design, with the embroidery effected in narrow lace braid. Sewn down either side of the opening of the jacket were rows of small black silk buttons.

The hat, which completed the costume, was a very large affair in black chiffon standing at the left side of which was a bunch of ostrich tips. The same rich trimming composed the decoration under the brim, three tips emanating from the inside of the crown and nestling closely against the hair.

Princess gowns of white crepe de chine are extremely fashionable and affected for dinners and receptions. A very becoming model has applied designs of white chantilly lace outlined with silver sequins. Two lilies of black chenille assert themselves at the bustline, and another is placed several inches below the waist. Starting from the center of the back is a panel of filmy lace, decorated on the left side with black velvet and flowers with yellow centers, producing a very striking effect.

At graceful intervals over the skirt, forming a graduated flounce, are applied velvet flowers, which may be in any favorite color, if black is not desired, but shading to the very palest tint of the color. Cerise is pretty because the different hues fading into shell pink make such a beautiful effect. The sleeves are close fitting almost to the wrist and have only the merest suggestion of an undercuff and this is composed of white crepe de chine and gathered into a wristband of white silk embroidered on black chenille, with the faintest tracery of gold threads.

Chiffon gowns besides being fair-like, have the advantage of being ever fashionable. They have been among the most conspicuous of the season's modes for the last four years and this summer promises to increase the designs.

A pretty model in canary yellow chiffon, so pale that it is scarcely more than a deep cream, shows an unusually artistic color scheme by being built over shell pink taffeta. The skirt is shirred about the hips in a deep yoke, the shirring extending below the waistline for about nine inches. From this point the skirt hangs in unconfined fullness to the floor, which it touches at the front and the sides, lengthening into a demi-train at the back.

The bodice is hand embroidered in dead white violets with yellow centers. There is a yoke, unlined, of the embroidered material and the under-cuffs are also made of it.

For a gown of this description there comes a Gainsborough hat of white trimmed with long, sweeping plumes. Under the brim are bunched masses of white silk violets, with some of the petals shading to a pale pink, while the centers are of a delicate shade of yellow.

A fashion left over from last year but which is none the less popular, however, is the spangled gown of black net. These are almost universally made over a white lining when there is not a black foundation. The combination affords excellent opportunity for the black and white effects which are so much seen and which are known as the "Bernhardt color scheme."

Spangles, or paillettes, as the French modistes are pleased to term them, are a never failing adornment for festive attire and stand ever ready to help us "rise and shine" but it remains for the spring and summer of 1902 to bring them into popular use for calling and afternoon gowns.

Black spangled skirts will be worn with separate waists of soft white silk, made with many rows of tucking and this form of toilette has the advantage of being comme il faut for any informal occasion after the noon hour has rolled around.

For the Complexion.

The complexion always suffers from biliousness or constipation. Unless the bowels are kept open the impurities from the body appear in the form of unsightly eruptions. DeWitt's Little Early Risers keep the liver and bowels in healthy condition and remove the cause of such troubles. C. E. Hooper, Albany, Ga., says: "I took DeWitt's Little Early Risers for biliousness. They were just what I needed. I am feeling better now than in years." Never gripe or distress. Safe, thorough and gentle. The very best pills. Tallman & Co. and Brock & McComas.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one druggist disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address, F. J.
