Among the first comers were the Canadian troops, especially detailed by Colonel Pinault. Their business-like methods and the ease and celerity with which they made themselves at home had a stimulating effect on the preparations for the big tournament, which opens this evening. Representatives of the engineering and signal corps also were in the garden early in the day, practicing their tower-building and other feats, that their work in the tournament may be without fault. There were present also United States troops of cavalry from Fort Myer, artillery from Washington Barracks and coast artillery from Fort Columbus, together with a number of companies of the New York state militia, all of which will take part in the tournament.

The program arranged for the opening tonight is one of the most interesting of the show. He would not listen to any proposition, but said he had decided, because of the friction between New York and Washington, that the best thing to do was to remove the commissioners at this place. I told him he was mistaken, that there had never been any friction between New York and Washington, but between Washington and New York.
