This leaves the situation in about this shape: Neither prehaps has enough to nominate without the Multnomah county delegation of 67 votes. It is therefore "up to" Multnomah county to decide, unless they bring in a dark horse from that county, in which event they will lose their commanding position in the convention, for the reason that without either Geer or Furnish Multnomah will not be able to control the convention.

As to Mr. Furnish's attitude towards the problem here presented, he ed today what would be the status of a Multnomah county dark horse, and would say nothing. Indeed, he wished to discuss no feature of the fight ceedingly busy and had not time for a stated interview.

But, among those who talk politics Platter, of this city. hereabouts, the contingency of a Multnomah county dark horse is being discussed considerably, and the foregoing appears to be about the average size-up.

It is practically assured that East ern Oregon will be for Furnish in solid rank, excepting Wasco county, where Moody has the control and, of course, there can be no help for Furnis the disposing power.

An Established Precedent.

No republican governor was ever re-elected in Oregon. None was ever renominated by his party, says the Oregonian. Beginning with Addison C. Gibbs, in war times, and passing on down to Zenas F. Moody, in 1882-86, the unbroken practice of the party has been to seck a new candidate to lead it in a fight succeeding a republican administration.
