To a small extent, the sympathy with Miles had something to do with the defeat of Crozier in the senate military committee. Miles has some friends on the committee who think he has been rather badly treated by the administration, and that sympathy helped in the fight against Crozier.

Frank Sargent, president of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen, saw the president and was tendered the position of commissioner-general of immigration. Mr. Sargent accepted the offer, but he told the president that it would be necessary for him to close up his business affairs before he could take charge of the office.

PACIFIC NORTHWEST NEWS

The problem of providing an adequate supply of wholesome water for the post at Fort Stevens is again occupying the attention of army officials. Several plans are under consideration.

At the request of the water commissioners of Oregon City, Senator Mitchell asked the general land office to set aside a tract of 338 sections, constituting the watershed of the south fork of the Clackamas river, as a reserve for the protection of the water supply of that city.

The Benson Logging Company is making extensive improvements at its camp at Oak Point, near Astoria, and has completed eight miles of railroad from Oak Point to Midway, where the logs are dumped into the river. The road is a broad-gauge one and the engines are of the largest design.

After seven months of actual use in Oregon public schools, the new series of text-books adopted under the Daly law have proved entirely satisfactory. MATLOCK GOES NORTH.

Will Look After Skagway Interests for Three Months.

Ex-Senator William Matlock will leave Tuesday evening for Portland to attend the democratic state convention as a delegate and from there he will go to Seattle, where he will take the boat for Skagway, Alaska. Mr. Matlock has some very valuable mining interests in cold regions of the north, and is also interested in other business enterprises. It is to look after these interests that he is going. He will be gone about three months. His son, Wesley Matlock, contemplated going at this time, but he has decided to wait a month before he leaves for the north.

SPEAK BY THE CARD

GEER'S NEWSPAPER SUPPORTERS' COMMENT

What the Statesman and Journal Say About the Work of the Republican State Convention.

The following comment on the republican state governorship candidate is from the Statesman and Journal, of Salem, Gov. Geer's personal supporting newspapers:

The Statesman.

The Statesman believed that the republican state convention was about to make a serious mistake if it failed to renominate Governor Geer, as a reward for his faithful services as chief executive and for the help he has rendered the party in the past, yet this will in no way lessen the sincerity of the support this paper will give the man nominated for the place.

We do not believe that Mr. Furnish was as strong a man as Governor Geer or a number of other available men, yet did we continue to hold to this opinion this fact would only tend to stimulate us to redouble our efforts in behalf of the success of the head of the ticket and the whole ticket.

The suggestion of a democratic governor at this time cannot be entertained for a moment by any republican who has the interests of the state at heart. The election of a democrat would bring discredit to the name and injury to the interests of the state. For Oregon to go democratic at a time when the state has so much at stake in the Oriental trade would be next to suicidal. It would in effect be saying to the east that we are not interested in the retention of the Philippines, and it would be considered as a rebuke to the republican party of the country.

The people of Oregon cannot afford this. The republicans of this state cannot afford it. They cannot at this time afford to do anything but loyally support the republican ticket, especially the candidate for governor.

A breach has been made in the republican party of Multnomah county. The party cannot look to that county with confidence for assistance in carrying the ticket. This is another reason why the republicans of the state generally should support the ticket with more enthusiasm than if there was certainty of a large majority to come out of the normally republican stronghold.

Mr. Furnish is a successful business man. He is honored and respected by all who know him. His closest friends are among those who have known him longest and best. As an official his record is clean. He will give to the state a business administration of its affairs. He should upon republicans all over the state new element into state politics. There of Oregon to rally to his support.

The Journal.

The nomination of W. J. Furnish for governor is a great victory for eastern Oregon, and will introduce a note that there has been a continuation probably will be less talk about state division, and there will be greater pressure than ever to secure state institutions for the great Inland Empire. If elected Mr. Furnish will give important appointments to that section of the state, and it is now easy to see that there has been a continuous campaign to land the head of the ticket for eastern Oregon. It will cause some soreness in western Oregon, where state politics has been monopolized for half a century, and the first governor of the twentieth century, if he hail from the republican party, will come from across the divide.

Joe Simon and his friends are doing exactly what Mitchell and his friends did two years ago, when they were shut out of the republican county convention, and the unit rule was enforced on them to make an anti-Mitchell republican ticket. Now the unit rule is enforced, and an anti-Simon ticket is made, and Mr. Simon and his friends step out, and form an alliance with the democrats and independents, to see what they can win with it. That there will be a fusion ticket made with the democrats of Multnomah county no one can doubt, and it may be elected as triumphantly as was Mr. Mitchell's Citizens' Ticket two years ago. The political alignment of the state is no longer on party lines, but two great factions contend for supremacy, one headed by Senator Mitchell and the other by Senator Simon, the latter's term not expiring until March 3, 1903.

What are the chances of electing a democratic governor? Many republicans are saying they are good, and will, they say, vote for Chamberlain. George E. Chamberlain, the present democratic district attorney at Portland, who was once elected attorney-general over Lionel R. Webster, republican, will be the democratic nominee. He will make a poor man's campaign, and is possessed of other elements of strength and popularity. As the nominee of the straight democratic machine he will not be as strong as he would be as an independent candidate. On a good platform, and if he will go out and champion reform ideas, something more than a mere desire to get the place and distribute the patronage among democrats—that kind of a campaign will give Chamberlain a great following, and the people may show the republicans that they have carried factional policies too far.

HOME SEEKER WONDERED WHAT WE LIVED ON HERE

Had Not Heard of Pendleton—Washington Has Been Well Advertised.

There has been but little lull in the westward movement since it started the first of March, when the transcontinental roads announced their special homeseekers' rates. Still people are coming west by the hundred, and hardly a day passes that from 50 to 200 and 300 do not pass through Pendleton on their way to Spokane and other points in the Inland Empire.

This morning's train going west brought 200 men, women and children who were mostly going to Spokane and the Yakima valley. Most of these people have either been in the west and know what they are going to, or have had representatives come on ahead and make arrangements for them.

Warren Evans, from Topeka, Kansas, was among the crowd that went through this morning, and to an East Oregonian reporter said:

"I am going to North Yakima, where I have already secured a small tract of land and am going to farm on a small scale and raise some fruit. Most of those on the train are going to Spokane and from there will branch out to their respective places. Most of them have money and are going to buy land, or have already contracted for a place through their agent."

"How Do You Live?"

Mr. Evans asked many questions in regard to this part of the country and was largely astonished when told that the land did not have to be irrigated around here to raise a crop. He was also surprised to know that there was a town the size of Pendleton in such a looking country, and asked what the people lived on. When told that this was one of the richest wheat raising countries in the west, he opened his mouth in astonishment, and said he did not see where anything grew more than a little garden spot. He was promptly informed that on the plateaus were rich farming lands that grew on an average of 35 and 40 bushels of wheat to the acre. Then he expressed the wish that he had known the truth about the Oregon country before he tied himself up in the Yakima country, for he thought he would like to buy a wheat ranch and live here. He said that the people where he came from know practically nothing about Oregon, and are going to Washington because they have heard of it through the railroad companies and land agents.

Wants to Help Others.

"I had stomach trouble all my life," says Edw. Mehler, proprietor of the Union Bottling Works, Erie, Pa., "and tried all kinds of remedies, went to several doctors and spent considerable money trying to get a moment's peace. William Caldwell Sues.

William Caldwell has sued C. C. Frazier and wife for judgment in the sum of $127 alleged to be due for threshing grain and cutting hay in 1897. The allegations are that during July and August, 1897, plaintiff cut 78½ acres of wheat at an agreed price of $2 per acre and cut and stacked 10 acres of hay at the agreed price of $1 per acre, making $167. Out of this $40 has been paid and the rest is still due. Plaintiff asks the court to give him judgment for the remaining amount of $127 and legal interest from the time it was earned and costs and disbursements of suit. T. G. Halley is attorney for plaintiff.
