WARM GAME OF BASEBALL
ON ALLTA STREET GROUNDS.

An Eleven Inning Game Without a Score Until the Last Inning, in Which Walla Walla Made One and Pendleton Two Runs.

Sunday dawned one of the most pleasant days of the year. It was a model baseball day. A better day could not have been manufactured for enthusiasts and players alike.

In the morning 750 lovers of baseball boarded a 14-coach double-headed train at Walla Walla, bound for Pendleton. Arriving at Athena, they witnessed a hotly-contested game between the professional Helena club and the Yellow Kids. After the Helena boys had tanned the kids to a lighter yellow by a score of 3 to 1, in a pretty game, it was "all aboard" for Pendleton. The excursion train, with an extra car from Athena, all loaded to the Pimmsoll mark, arrived in Pendleton at about 1:45. Manager Sharpstein accompanied his team, the Helena and Athena players were on board, so that all told, nearly 1000 visitors came in on the train to see the game. A cornet band of 32 pieces, from Walla Walla, enlivened the occasion.

At the Grounds.

The crowd commenced to move toward the Alta street grounds by 2 o'clock, and soon the grand stand and bleachers were jammed full. Those who could not get seats lined up along the right and left field lines, gradually working their way forward until the officials had all they could do to keep the playing field clear.

Tim Keefe Umpired.

At 3:15 Timothy Keefe, one of the catchers of the Helena professional teams of the Pacific Northwest League, called the game. The audience was nearly equally divided in its partisanship and the playing was applauded with great gusto. It was an immense crowd present, estimated at from 2000 to 2500, the receipts being over $600.

They're Off in a Bunch.

Mr. Buchet was the first man up Walla Walla going to bat, with Bobby Wilner pitching for Pendleton. Walla Walla's crack first baseman knocked a dinkey grounder to "Reliable George" Hartman at first. Strange as it may seem, there was a fumble, and Buchet tramped the stuffing out of the first base with his lilliputian hoofs. Bradbury knocked a grounder to Ziegler and was out at first, Buchet going to second. "Babe" Brown reached first and things didn't look a bit good. McEvoy batted the ball toward third, and a double play resulted.

Ziegler reached first on "hit by pitcher," but was caught trying to steal second, in the first inning. From that stage until the seventh inning not a Pendleton footprint could be found imbedded in first base.

It was one, two, three for Walla Walla in the second. Buchet hit safe in the third but was stopped at first. McEvoy got as far as second in the fourth, which point had not theretofore been reached by a man on either side. Robert Brown made a pretty double play in the fifth, throwing the ball to Hartman for the second part of it, which stopped what might have become a troublesome series of events for Pendleton. The seventh was one to cause the Indians to crawl into their blankets. After two were out Fisher got a life from the shot stop, and took second when Ellis was hit by the pitcher. Shea shot one out toward center field, which Dick Knox took on the dead run, to the great delight of the Pendleton contingent, as well as to his old friends, the Helena boys. But it was in the eighth inning that the Pendleton rooters closely resembled mourners at a first-class funeral.

Steltz struck the ball to the ground in front of home and was safe by virtue of the catcher's failure to pick it up in time. A passed ball put Steltz on second, and an out at first landed him on third. "Babe" Brown knocked a low fly inside the left foul line, which Demoling captured by the most sensational play of the day. It looked bad again in the ninth, but no score came, and the tenth was easy.

The First Run.

Pendleton had Demoling on first in the eighth, but he got no further. In the ninth R. Brown took first on the pitcher's error and second on an overthrow, with none out, but he stopped right there while Ziegler, Knox and Wilner were being killed off.

Walla Walla started the run getting in the first part of the eleventh inning. Up to the eleventh inning Walla Walla had made but two safe hits, while Pendleton had one. "Babe" Brown singled and McEvoy did the same. Then, what did Wilner do but make a wild pitch, advancing each runner one base. The hearts of the Pendletonians sank to six or eight degrees below zero, and Wilner only smiled. Williams knocked an easy grounder to Wilner. Brown started home, but Foley received the ball and chased him back toward third. After cavorting back and forth for a few seconds, Foley dropped the thrown ball and Brown reached the home plate, the first run in the game, and that for Walla Walla. But with two men on the bases Fisher was retired on an easy grounder from Clemens to Hartman. Ellis knocked a foul to Ziegler, and Shea made the third man out on a high fly to Knox.

Pendleton Made Two and Won.

Demoling knocked a slow grounder to Fisher, who threw on the bound to Buchet. That gentleman made his only error of the game right there, when it was needed by Pendleton. Foley made the prettiest bunt of the game to Steltz, and was out at first, Demoling having cantered to second. A wild pitch put Demoling on third, and Brown was given his base on balls, after which he stole second. Ziegler batted out a safe single to short left field, and took second on the throw to third to catch Brown. Dickey Knox stepped to the bat with a feeling that he was due to do and he did. He smashed the second ball pitched for the longest hit of the game, a drive to deep center field. "Babe" Brown backed up and jumped up, making a frantic but vain attempt to catch it. Demoling and Brown crossed the home plate and the greatest game of baseball ever played in the Inland Empire was at an end. It made no difference whatever whether "Babe" Brown caught the ball in center field or not for Pendleton's Brown would have scored anyway, after the put out, for there is not a baseball player dead or alive who could have thrown the ball home in time to catch him.

The fielding of Knox, Barlow, Ziegler, Demoling and Clemens for Pendleton was at times sensational, for they captured at least seven very difficult flies. Bradbury played a great game at second for Walla Walla, accepting all of his eight chances without an error, two of his catches being of apparently safe hits. Williams at short also caught one fly which was a beauty. The game literally abounded with sensational fielding.
