

TIMELY ANNIVERSARIES.

April 24.

- 753 B. C.—Date usually taken for the foundation of Rome; it was captured in 410 A. D. by the Goths, in 455 by the Vandals, and in 476 the last vestige of the empire was destroyed.
1547—Victory of Charles V. over the Protestants at Muhlberg and end of the war of the Smalcald league.
1731—Daniel Foe or De Foe, author of "Robinson Crusoe" and other works, died; born 1661.
1743—Edmund Cartwright, inventor of the power loom, born; died 1822.
1764—Thomas Addis Emmet, Irish patriot, born in Cork; died 1827.
1861—Farragut passed the forts at the mouth of the Mississippi in his attack on New Orleans.
1891—Field Marshal von Moltke died suddenly at Berlin; born 1801.
1895—President McKinley called for 125,000 volunteers to carry out the instructions of congress and interfere in Cuba.

"I have found that advertising in the East Oregonian pays," said R. E. Tarbet, of the firm of Bennett & Tarbet, proprietors of "The Fair," a representative of the East Oregonian. "The big advertisement we had in the daily a week ago was the means of our store having one of the biggest sales and largest crowds we have had since we have been in business here. The special sale where we gave special low prices, we advertised in the East Oregonian, and feel that it should be given due credit for bringing us the large business. I have not been a big advertiser, but am now convinced that money spent judiciously in advertising is a good investment, if placed in the right mediums; those that the people depend upon for news."

PARTISAN SHALLOW TALK.

The Portland Oregonian is not helping the cause of W. J. Furnish, republican candidate for governor, or the republican ticket by its unfair references and censure of George E. Chamberlain. On the other hand, the Portland paper's intent is being misdirected, with the result that it is weakening those whom it hopes to strengthen.

The Oregonian said in a recent editorial statement that if "District Attorney Chamberlain should use the power of his office, he would close quickly all the places of vice, crime and infamy, open in violation of law in Portland. But it will not be done. It would interfere with the vote on Governor."

The Portland paper knows this is an unfair reference, made simply for political effect, but it is so transparent and dishonest that it will have an opposite result from what is intended. The Oregonian knows, that it does not desire and never has desired District Attorney Chamberlain to proceed to enforce the law to the letter in the way it points out. It knows that as the mouthpiece of the people of Portland, and as a "moulder of public opinion," it has advised against this very action, for which it now would have people believe Mr. Chamberlain is alone responsible.

Mr. Chamberlain has not enforced the letter of the law against all the vice in Portland, because the people of Portland were not in favor of it. Down deep in its heart, the Oregonian feels that Mr. Chamberlain is not guilty, but for political reasons it would condemn and sacrifice a man whose action it would otherwise approve.

The Oregonian is too big and wise a paper to be dishonest, to be unfair, to be narrow between the eyes, to be one-sided, to be a peanut journal, with the partisan yellow-dog attachment, for which a country weekly in this city and generation should be ashamed.

It is not well for a great public journal to make its hypocrisy too apparent, even in advancing the interests of those it wishes to see occupying great public trusts.

BE TRUE TO DUTY.

Democrats in office and those hoping to get in office must be sincere, and zealous in the cause of the people. They must show the voter that they consider a public office a public trust, not a private snap. They must not seek office for the purpose of filling their pockets at the expense of the tax payers. If this is the desire uppermost, then they do not belong in a public office, but in a more notorious public institution, where their liberties would be curtailed.

The people, those who vote, will appreciate good service and are quick to respond to the appeals of those who are sincere as public servants. Democrats everywhere have but to show their fidelity and ability to work in the interests of the people to be rewarded with the trusts they seek, or for which they are candidates.

There should be no attempt on the part of any candidate to "fool the people," for that cannot be done. Any effort in that direction will surely be found out. In some mysterious way the true intent of men is made apparent. It shows in their faces and in their acts, and their fellows read them like open books. It is a reflection upon the people's intelligence to make an attempt to "fool" them. It cannot be done, and it should not be done, if it could.

Those who attempt it as politicians and as office seekers, go upon the rocky shore of failure.

JUDGE LOWELL TO WOODMEN.

Judge Stephen A. Lowell, in his speech to the assembled Woodmen of the World and Women of Woodcraft and visitors in Pendleton, on Tuesday said in part: "The genius of our age lies not in its banks and factories or its achievements in science and mechanic arts, but in its schools and churches, its charities and fraternities, and when in the last great census men are weighed, not counted, we shall be measured not by our material triumphs, but by the uplift of humanity."

"This is a world of contrasts. Side by side are the fairest flower and the noxious weed, the yellow grain and the barren field, the sterile rock and the flowing river, the stately tree and the dwarfed shrub, the stormy cloud and the azure sky, the splendid palace and the humble cottage, and Dives and Lazarus touch shoulders as the world whirls on."

"The counterpart is in social life. Wellington and Shaftsbury, the conqueror of Napoleon and the founder of the Ragged School of London, Carnegie and Livingstone, the steel king and the hero missionary, Cecil Rhodes and Abraham Lincoln, the builder of empire and the liberator of men, all are types of the contrasts in life's effort, the savagery and the charity in our civilization."

"We boast of the material triumphs of our time, of the energies of nature which we have harnessed, of the wealth created, and point to magnificent cities, splendid homes, rushing trains, the grace of art and the beauty of literature, but when ultimate history is written it will be found that the truest heartbeat of this period of human history is philanthropic mercy and human sympathy."

"The mightiest influence in this world comes yet from the manger of Bethlehem, and the associations of men which count for most for the betterment of men, next the church itself, are the institutions founded upon the most famous parable of the Master, the symbolic story from the hills of Samaria, when the word neighbor was impressed with the sanctity of the law, and the duty of man to man declared. Upon the sentiment of the parable of the Good Samaritan the fraternal and beneficiary societies are founded, and the higher charity by them represented is the tender hand upon the brow of pain, the uplifting arm to the down-fallen and discouraged, the avenging angel to the oppressed, the whispered sympathy in bereavement, the material aid to the widow and the orphan, and the ray of sunlight across the path of death."

"But these societies stand for more than that. They insist upon a membership which shall be obedient to law, that law which came upon the tablets in the mysteries of Sinai, and that law which must exist to sustain the state. He who is a law-breaker, or who fails to recognize and honor the law has no place within these halls where the high injunction upon the neighbor rests."

"Aid beside obedience to law, they demand devotion to duty. No matter where, wherever placed, however situated, humble or exalted, the requisite of membership must always be plain devotedness to duty, duty to God, to state, to community, to family, to one's own self, the duty which halts not at sacrifice, if necessary, for conscience's sake, and public interest. Wendell Phillips, born to wealth and position, with the sunshine of a brilliant material future before his young manhood, devoted his life to the cause of the lowly, but he did it at the sacrifice of a cherished career. Next to Lincoln, his was the matchless influence of the struggle, and so long as human freedom invokes the prayer and praise of men, and pulses quicken in the battle for equal rights, the lowly and the just of earth will see in the halo of his eloquence the greatest teacher of his time."

And finally there must be character. That sort of character which is of value in seasons of temptation. That sort of character which has in it the elements of obedience to law, courage to perform duty, and mercy to reflect kindness and sacrifice. There is no mightier influence in any community or in any position than cleanliness of character, and right living. We have been regaled for two long years, in press and upon the platform, with the rival claims of two men to the honors of the battle of Santiago, but down deep in the heart of the people will always be a feeling that the real hero of that day was the noble captain of the Texas, who, when his men were shouting in the exultation of victory, said, "Don't cheer, boys, the poor devils are dying." There have been able rulers on England's throne than Victoria, but the influence of her womanly character, the kindness of her nature, the cleanliness of her life in her exalted station, radiated through Christendom for good everywhere.

"There is unceasing need for the principles of the great organization of fraternity and philanthropy. We have no true civilization yet. We are living under the domain of the dollar. But the sun is shining on the heights, and the race is moving upwards from the sludges."

"As you go take this sentiment, a simple couplet borrowed, but fitting to the hour:

"There are loyal hearts, there are spirits brave, There are souls that are pure and true, Then give to the world the best you have And the best will come back to you."

This world's but a mirror of king and slave, It's just what you are and do, Then give to the world the best you have And the best shall come back to you."

Arrangements for the dedication of the Odd Fellows' Home, near Kenilworth, next Saturday morning, followed by a celebration in the evening of the 83rd anniversary of the institution of the Odd Fellows' order, have been completed at Portland.

HACKING.

That word hacking is expressive to those who have experienced the aggravating constant cough, which is called a hacking cough. Sometimes it is the result of a cold, or of grip, and sometimes it is a consequence of catarrh, which unchecked has gradually involved the lungs in disease. Such a cough finds its cure in Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery which cures bronchitis, obstinate coughs, lung disease, hemorrhage, and conditions which, if neglected or unskillfully treated, lead to consumption.

"For twelve years I was a sufferer from catarrh and was treated by one of the best physicians in the State of North Carolina, who said the trouble had reached my lungs," writes Mr. J. M. Patton, of Clotho, Transylvania Co., N. C. "I grew worse every day until I tried Dr. Pierce's medicines. Will say Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery with one bottle of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy cured me, and to-day I am well and hearty, and I will say further that my former physician, Dr. W. M. Lyday, recommends Dr. Pierce's medicines to me and to others. I am sure your medicines will cure any case of catarrh that exists. I recommend them to all."

If you ask your dealer for "Golden Medical Discovery" because you have confidence in its cures, do not allow yourself to be switched off to a medicine claimed to be "just as good," but which you did not ask for and of which you know nothing. Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser is sent free on receipt of stamps to pay expense of mailing only. Send 21 one-cent stamps for the paper covered book, or 31 stamps for the cloth-bound volume. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

It Pays to Trade at the Peoples Warehouse. OUT OF THE ORDINARY is the selling we are now doing and many are the flattering remarks that exceptionally good dressers are making about our superior lines of tailor-made SKELETON CLOTHING. There are facts about the making of Ske'eton Clothing for mid-summer wear that are not fully appreciated by many buyers: It's the most difficult to make. It's the most stylish and comfortable for hot days—if properly made. No garments are worn under more severe conditions—conditions that make them like rags in a day or two—unless they are made to withstand these hardships. This kind of clothing is our greatest specialty in summer. Our success this year and past years are our proofs that our SKELETON CLOTHING is superior to any others. We've studied it for years and have mastered the art. PRICES ARE RIGHT. Agents for Butter-ick Patterns. The Peoples Warehouse. PENDLETON, OREGON. Mail Orders Filled Promptly. Send for Samples.
