THE HEREFORD SALE

ONE ANIMAL BROUGHT $480 — SOLD TO C. B. WADE.

More Animals Sold Here in One Day Than in Four Days in Baker City and La Grande.

The Hereford cattle sale Wednesday and today attracted quite a crowd of prospective buyers to the Oregon Railroad & Navigation Company's stock yards, in this city, where there are the finest lot of blooded cattle that ever came into Oregon. Indeed, it is a fact, that never before has so large a bunch of fine blooded cattle been brought here and those who can afford to, are taking advantage of this opportunity to introduce the Hereford stock into their herds. Perhaps there is an occasional animal in this part of the country that is just as well bred and as fine as any in this bunch, but such animals are scarce.

Those in charge of the cattle are somewhat discouraged over the success of their sales, as they are selling them at smaller figures than they anticipated, and are not disposing of them as fast as they should. One hundred and sixty-one bulls and heifers, mostly yearlings, were brought to Baker City, where the first sales were held the 18th and 19th. From there they were taken to La Grande and in the two places only 36 were sold, and the rest were brought to Pendleton. The prices paid for these animals will average nearly $200, but the breeders say they are selling them from $25 to $50 less than they would obtain in the Middle States. They are auctioned off and knocked down at whatever is bid. None are taken back after once put on the block.

The sales here so far were at better figures than at any other place where these cattle have been. While some of the cattle went at small figures, in several instances sharp bidding was indulged in, when an especially fine bull or heifer was offered, and the price was run up to a handsome one. The average price for the 26 sold would not reach $200, although one sold for $480.

This latter was an extra well bred and fine 18-months-old bull. When it was put up the bidding was very sharp. Several were in the field until the price went above $300, when all dropped out of the contest except C. B. Wade, of Pendleton, and A. G. Weisner, of Lewiston, Idaho. Weisner wanted the animal and so did Wade. They bid against each other until Wade's bid reached $480 and Weisner refused to raise it higher. One of the most conspicuous figures around the sale while this was going on was George Darveau, proprietor of Hotel St. George. He was very anxious that Wade get this particular animal, and when the man from Idaho would raise Mr. Wade, Darveau would jump to his feet and yell:

"Don't let Idaho have him, Wade, I will give you $10 if you buy him. Don't let Idaho get away with you Pendleton, I will stand to your back."

Following is the list of the sales made yesterday with the names of the purchasers and prices paid:

An Unsinkable Ship.

Experiments are being made on a new apparatus for use in case of collision on the ocean. By turning a small wheel in the pilot house, twenty airtight doors are instantly closed, and these compartments are more than enough to keep any vessel afloat. If it is a success it will make ocean travel as free from danger as Hostetter's Stomach Bitters does the road through life. It is a splendid tonic free from all injurious narcotics, and one that the most delicate system can retain. In the spring when the weather is variable, it is very beneficial as it protects the system from sudden colds and la grippe. Don't fail to try it. It also cures indigestion and dyspepsia, insomnia, headache, nervousness and biliousness.
