OPENED CAMPAIGN

public money upon claims not warranted by law.

Record of His Opponent.

Candidates for office must be judged by the official record which they have made. There is no other standard of measurement; if in this they have shown an incapacity or a disposition to abuse public trust, then is it reasonable to expect that in the continuance of any public service a different course will be pursued by them?

My opponent is a most estimable gentleman. What official records has he made to entitle him to serve the people as their chief executive?

Furnish Was a Democrat.

Mr. Furnish at one time served as a democrat as deputy United States marshal, and on two occasions he was elected on the democratic ticket as sheriff of Umatilla county, and if he made any record in either of these positions calculated to draw public attention to him as a man who was bent upon saving the tax payers either of the United States or of Umatilla county, I have yet to have that record pointed out to me. On the contrary it has been charged that while serving in these capacities he laid the foundation of a big fortune.

It may be that he will go out on the stump and point out to the people of Oregon that particular phase of his official life which entitles him to the suffrages of the people. About him as a citizen I have naught to say but what is most kindly. As a politician I am willing to concede that he is a most excellent organizer, for he has on many occasions set in the councils of the democratic party and assisted in snatching victory out of defeat. If the charges which are made against him by highly esteemed people who opposed his candidacy in the primaries and in the convention be true, he intends, indeed, by the use of money to make such a campaign as will debauch the politics of Oregon and bring them to a standard of degradation only equaled by that of Hanna, Platt, Quay and Croker.

What Are Furnish's Qualifications?

What reasons are given by the adherents of my opponent for his election to the chief magistracy? It is claimed for him that his business qualifications as a bank president are sufficient to warrant his election as governor.

Again, it is charged that I am a good fellow, genial and companionable, and unable to say no to the appeals which are made to me in private life and to appeals which may be made to me as executive of the state, while my opponent is a man of firmness and of stability, capable of answering no to any appeal that may be made to him in any walk in life. To this I answer that I would rather when I am laid away in mother earth, have some one stand at the head of my grave and say for me: "Here lies a good, companionable fellow who could not answer no to the appeals of the widow and orphan in his private life, and who in his public career listened with mercy to the appeal of the condemned and unfortunate," than to have some one stand beside my grave and say: "Here lies a man who in life was positive and firm; he accumulated wealth and endowed universities, but his ear was deaf to the appeals for mercy and his heart was impregnable to suffering and to sorrow."

Chamberlain's Record in Office.

Again it is charged by my opponent that in the various public offices which I have held, no record has been made by me. To this I answer, what record has been made by my opponent that he or his friends shall point with derision to my public life? I call attention to the fact that as the youngest member of the legislature in 1889 my party was in the hopeless minority in that body, but my protest was registered against each extravagant item in the appropriation bill of that year, and such protests absolutely disregarded.

As attorney-general of this state, I was enabled to conduct the affairs of that office upon the salary fixed by law, and paid my own office expenses out of that salary without asking additional appropriation at the hands of the legislature; that almost every criminal case that went to the supreme court of the state was prosecuted by me on appeal; that in the two great cases against the Southern Pacific company, I was enabled to enforce the rate bills which were fixed by the railroad commission, establishing the important proposition to the people of this state that these great corporations were measurably subject to legislative control; that I instituted actions for and recovered in the name of the state, taxes from every county which had been in arrears to the state, thus making those counties which were delinquent contribute equally with those which were prompt to the expenditures of government.

As district attorney of Multnomah county I have been enabled to attend to the business of the county, civil and criminal, without applying for assistance to outside counsel and without additional expense other than the law provides, and have saved the county in three items of expense alone about $15,000 per annum.

Housework is hard work without GOLD DUST—the modern cleanser; better and more economical than soap.

I hesitate not to open the book of my official life to the people of this state along side of my official record that my opponent has made, and leave it to the voters to say which of the two has been most faithful in the discharge of public trust.

Initiative and Referendum.

There is to be submitted to the voters of this state a proposed amendment to the constitution. I refer to the initiative and referendum amendment.

I appeal to you here and now to cast your ballot in favor of this important constitutional amendment at the coming election. Do not let it escape your attention in glancing over the ballots. It is the only salvation for the mass of the people as against the greed of corporate wealth.

Municipal Control of Public Utilities.

There is a plank in our platform to which I desire to direct your attention for a few moments, and that is to municipal ownership or control of public utilities.

Wherever cities and towns have assumed either the ownership or control of the water systems within their jurisdiction, it has in all cases resulted in better and more economical service to the people.

Chinese and Japanese Exclusion.

The democratic platform declares in favor of Chinese exclusion and the taking of such steps as may be necessary to restrict the immigration of Japanese labor, with which in many places American labor is being supplanted.

It is one of the anomalies of congressional legislation that when the ship subsidy bill was under discussion, those who advocated the subsidy bill urged for its passage that the American people ought to have American registered vessels, manned by American seamen, constituting a navy of patriotic citizens ready for any emergency to fight the battles of our country, and yet the same men who favored the building of another great trust in the shape of subsidies to ship owners, come in to the halls of congress and without blush or shame insist that that portion of the exclusion bill now before congress which forbade the employment of Chinese as sailors on any American ship, should be stricken out, thus placing it in the power of the ship owner, subsidized by national grant, to do away with the American sailor at a fair wage rate and put in his place the Asiatic at a salary upon which the American laborer could not live. What consistency!

I have no doubt but that congress will eventually pass some sort of an act against Chinese immigration. How far it will go it is impossible at this time to state.

Trusts.

Two distinguished republicans of this state addressed a large public gathering in the city of Portland less than six months ago. By one it was urged that the excessive tariff rates prescribed by the Dingley tariff law now in force had nothing whatever to do with the repeated creation and formation of trusts in the United States, whilst the other gentleman upon the same platform and upon the same occasion, stated in substance that the high tariff rates prescribed by this law were responsible in very large measure for such trusts.

Which of these gentlemen is right? There is no question but that since this law has been in force one trust after another has been formed upon massive scales, crushing out all competition and making it impossible for a man of limited capital and means to compete with aggregated corporate wealth. Their formation, it was claimed, would cheapen production and place commodities in the hands of the consumer at a less rate, whilst the laborer would receive a higher pay for his services. The first result has not been accomplished. As a matter of fact, the manufactured articles have reached the consumer at an enhanced price, and where there has been an advance in wages, as a rule it has been largely due to the demand of organized labor.

The creation and conduct of trusts should be regulated by law which they should be compelled by the courts to respect.

Rights of Labor.

One of the most marked features of the times is the rapid and intelligent organization of labor. All over the country it has placed itself in a position to assert its rights, and so perfect is its organization that in most cases it has been enabled to procure a compliance with its demands.

It is one of the healthy signs of the times that vast armies of laborers go quietly to work, demanding an adjustment of their grievances and accomplishing what they start out to perform without violence and without the breach of any law. The time is not far distant when intelligent laborer and intelligent employer will come together and confer in a business-like way over differences, and where those differences can not be adjusted, arbitration will be resorted to and labor troubles entirely avoided.

The Philippines.

The Philippine archipelago and Porto Rico have been finally added to our territory by treaty. That they belong to the United States there can be no question, and now that their annexation has become an accomplished fact, we insist that the constitution of the United States ought to follow the flag, and that they should be treated exactly the same way and manner as inland territory of the United States is treated.

There is no reason why the products of our farm and our factory should not be sent to the Philippines and in return their hemp, tobacco and sugar shipped to us freed from any tariff charges. As long, however, as the tobacco and sugar trusts dictate legislation in the halls of congress, it is more than humanity can hope for to expect the tariff wall to be beaten down between this country and our possessions abroad.

The platform adopted by the convention advocates this policy of treatment toward our insular possessions.
