Alexander Dept. Store

Direct From Old England

We have this day received the first direct import order of TOOTH BRUSHES brought to Pendleton. They are made of the finest English bristles, with wax back (a new idea) which makes it impossible for the bristles to come out, as is the case with most brushes. Every brush has our name and guarantee stamped firmly on it, and is not only backed up by ourselves, but the manufacturers as well. Should any brush prove unsatisfactory, a new one will be given in its place or money refunded. They are in hard, medium and soft bristles. Where can you buy a brush like them for the money? We are making a leader of them at 35 CENTS.

THE Golconda Gold Mine

A Plain Statement of Fact:
 The GOLCONDA MINE, in the Sumpter district, with all equipment, and ten other claims, was recently purchased by Golconda Consolidated Gold Mines Company, principal office Pendleton, which is now operating the mine. The full purchase price is paid, and all but the treasury stock disposed of to the person who advanced the purchase price.

There was left in the treasury for an operating fund 200,000 shares of treasury stock. Some of this stock is offered for sale but not exceeding 200,000 shares of it will be sold; as that will supply ample funds until the mine is more than self sustaining. This stock is offered at 10 CENTS A SHARE for the next 30 days.

As an investment of this character nothing equals it. To those whose worth those at work in the mine, who are in a position to know what is in the Golconda, have bought stock at ten cents a share to the extent of their financial ability. Those who have the money which they can spare for the purpose should take the very best investment they ever made in their lives.

Address all orders for stock with checks in favor of

THE CHIEF SALTESE

HE WAS A BRAINY INDIAN AND HAD MANY FRIENDS

Two Pioneers Talk Entertainingly of Experiences with the Chief of the Coeur d'Alenes.

The death of the old Indian chief, Saltese, has awakened memories among the pioneers of Spokane, says the Spokesman-Review. M. M. Cowley, who was in a reminiscent mood, said: "I have known Saltese, or Saltee, since 1866, and at one time was very well acquainted with him. He used to do lots of trading with me when I had a store at Spokane Bridge, and I found him to be far different from the average 'siwash.' He was not the hereditary chief of the Coeur d'Alenes, but in his younger days was one of the war chiefs, and when the hereditary chief, Seon Shinn, died Saltese had so risen from the ranks of the people of his tribe that he was elected to fill the place and fulfilled his duties with much executive ability. I have never believed that Saltese was a full blood Coeur d'Alene as his characteristics were not those of that tribe. Nothing is easier than to rouse the ire of a Coeur d'Alene, and Saltese seldom, if ever, lost his temper. He would submit gracefully to the inevitable when it was necessary, without much resistance.

"In his younger days he was something of a warrior, and did credit to his position as one of the war chiefs, but in later years his acts were always done with a consideration of results rather than of prejudice.

Helped Toward Peace.
 "Saltese was a born diplomat, and to that he owed the success with which he managed the affairs of his people. Always conservative, he never antagonized anyone, and his arguments against war with the whites did much toward the preservation of peace and amicable feeling. It is true that he joined in the fight against Wright, but that was in his younger days, before the regard for his people's welfare overbalanced his own prejudices."

"The first time I saw Saltese was near Couer d'Alene lake," said James N. Glover. "I and my partner had taken a trip up the Spokane river and had practically reached the lake, when we decided to land at a little meadow which is near the outlet of the lake to try and scare up a deer. I stayed in the boat while my partner struck inland. I was out in the stream in the boat when I heard yells like a band of Indians on the war-path, and turning toward the direction of the sounds saw in the water and making toward me a huge black bear.

Saltese After the Bear.
 "On the opposite bank were Saltese and some of his people who were going to church. They had scared up the bear and had it in the water. Saltese plunged into the stream and drove it back to land. My partner then came with his rifle and fired. The bear, slightly wounded took to the water again. It was coming straight at me and I thought it was all off with me, when Saltese drove his horse between me and the bear and changed his course. The bear landed again, and we all chased him up on the prairie. Saltese's wife could imitate a hound perfectly, and with her aid we soon had it treed. My partner then shot it and it rolled to the ground dead. I commenced to skin it with all the Indians sitting around looking on, and when the gall bag was removed one of the Indians came up, took it and went over to where Saltese was sitting with his wife. Taking the chief's hat from his head he began to rub the gall into the felt. All the Indians began to laugh and I asked what the matter was.

Wanted a Baby Boy.
 "Saltese laughed as loud as anyone, but he finally managed to tell me that he had no children by his first wife, and that there was a superstition among the Indians that if the gall of a bear were rubbed into a husband's hat he would become the father of a fine boy. We had a great feast then and Saltese made a speech. In a few days my partner and I finished our business and returned to Spokane. It could not have been three months later when Saltese came into the store with his wife, who was carrying on her back a fine boy baby.

"Saltese was often around the store and I always found him to be scrupulously honest. He was far above the average Indian in principle and diplomacy, and was wise enough to rule his people without discord."

A Doctor's Bad Plight.
 "Two years ago, as the result of a severe cold, I lost my voice," writes Dr. M. L. Scarborough, of Hebron, Ohio, "then began an obstinate cough. Every remedy known to me as a practicing physician for 35 years, failed, and I daily grew worse. Being urged to try Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds, I found quick relief, and for last ten days have felt better than for two years." Positively guaranteed for Throat and Lung troubles of Tallman & Co. 60c and $1. Trial bottles free.
