John Lawrey returned this morning from Portland, where he was in attendance at the Odd Fellows' anniversary services and the dedication of the Odd Fellows' home Saturday. Mr. Lawrey says that he saw John Lathrop and that he is looking much better than when he left here. Portland atmosphere and politics seem to agree with him.

J. M. Elgin, formerly of Pendleton, now one of the most extensive farmers of Franklin county, near Connell, Wash., where he was compelled to re-sow 1000 acres this spring, has met with a piece of well deserved good fortune. About six weeks ago Mr. Elgin put a new diamond drill at work on his place, and it has now encountered an ample supply of water, at a depth of about 320 feet.

Ben F. Wells has just returned from the McKay creek range where he has been looking after his cattle and getting them on their summer range. Mr. Wells says that the grass is not very far advanced as yet on account of the late spring and cold weather. He also stated that it would not be so good this season as usual for range gets shorter every season as more of the country becomes settled and every man gets a few head of cattle or sheep. He says that the range is overstocked to a large degree and that the time is rapidly coming when every man will have to cut his herd down just to the number he can range on his own land.

Joe Basler Injured.

Joe Basler, the furniture man, is laid up at home with a sprained foot that happened in a most peculiar way. He has a habit of running up stairs two or three steps at a time and when climbing to the second story of his residence, on West Court street, Sunday, he caught his toe under the edge of the step and fell. In some way the foot was twisted in the instep and he will be off duty for several days as a result. No bones are broken, but the sprain is quite painful.

Neglect Means Danger.

Smith, Butternut, Mich., says "DeWitt's Little Early Risers are the most satisfactory pills I ever took. Never gripe or cause nausea." Tallman & Co. and Brock & McComas.

Most Effective Advertising.

That advertising is the most effective which attracts the eye and appeals to the brain. Strong adjectives may be as much out of taste in an advertisement as in a bit of more aspiring literature. Exaggeration is always to be avoided. People nowadays demand sincerity in all matters of business. It is observable that all the big and successful advertisers are most careful as to their statements of fact. They realize that confidence is the key-stone in the arch of trade. Their success came of their jealous regard for their work.

BY THE CAR LOAD

Dainty Children. It is not difficult to teach children dainty ways, writes a mother in The Household. They often look down upon a dirty child with more disgust than older people do. Mussy hair, dirty finger nails and careless bathing can all be overcome with a little patient explaining and teaching.

Give to every child as soon as he is old enough to handle them his own brush and comb and a little manicure set. Show him how the different articles should be used and encourage the use of them in every way. Each time they are used see that they are put back in good order.

Reserved.

Joe—I saw you at the opera with Miss Upperton last night. She's certainly a beauty, but entirely too reserved for me.

Fred—You just bet she is. I saw her father this morning and reserved her especially for myself.—Chicago News.

Realism Most Attractive.

"Do you believe in realism in the drama?" asked the friend.

"I do," answered Mr. Stormington Barnes. "Many is the time I would have given a great deal to play Macbeth with a real banquet."—Washington Star.
