A FOOL'S ERRAND

A. HERMAN, TRAVELING ROUND WORLD HANDCUFFED.

His Story is That He is Doing it in the Interest of Medical Science, to Prove That Wearing Handcuffs is Not Injurious to a Person's Health.

Wednesday morning when the train hauling the great Pan-American shows arrived in town, a young man, with a blue sweater, heavy walking shoes and knickerbockers, and his hands fastened together with the ordinary handcuffs for prisoners, stepped off the train and wended his way up town. He created quite a sensation among the early risers who were on the street and was held up by a policeman who thought that he might be an escaped crazy man.

The young man is Alfred Herman, of Bakersfield, Cal., and he is making a tour of the world with his hands chained together to demonstrate to medical science whether or not the use of handcuffs on prisoners for a period of time are injurious to a man.

Herman says the way he came to start out on this fool's errand was because of a discussion that arose among the young medical students of a medical college he was attending, where some claimed that the use of handcuffs on prisoners should be done away with, for the reason that to keep a man's hands in the position necessary for them to be handcuffed for any length of time was very injurious to the health, while others claimed that the judicious use of the steel cuffs would not hurt a man. Herman was one of the doubting Thomases and he said that he would wager $1000 that he could traverse the world with his hands chained together and return home none the worse for the experience. The wager was taken, and on the 22d of March he started. The conditions of the wager were that he was to tour the world with his hands chained together with the ordinary handcuffs and never take them off only when he slept. To make this certain to the man who put up the money, Herman wears the cuffs sealed and at every hotel where he stops he gives a sealed envelope to the clerk. This letter contains the key and instructions for the clerk to take off the handcuffs when Herman is ready to retire and when he gets up in the morning to replace them with the seal and return the key and instructions to the envelope, where it is again sealed and remains so until he stops for the night at the next place. He is to be back in Bakersfield within 18 months from the time of starting.

Herman attracted quite a curious crowd when he exhibited himself in the streets of Pendleton, and those who saw him were eager to hear his story. When asked how he made his way, he said that he made some money by exhibiting himself in show windows of large cities—usually in a music store, where they would give him $20 to sit in the window and play a piano or other musical instrument for an afternoon. He also makes some money by selling pictures of himself, and some tender-hearted people give him money to help to take him on his journey. He started penniless and has nothing except what he has on his back.

Holds up a Congressman.
 "At the end of the campaign," writes Champ Clark, Missouri's brilliant congressman, "from overwork, nervous, tension, loss of sleep and constant seeping I had utterly collapsed. It seemed that all the organs of my body were out of order, but three bottles of Electric Bitters made me all right. It's the best all-round medicine ever sold over a druggist's counter." Overworked, run down men and weak, sickly women gain splendid health and vitality from Electric Bitters. Try them. Only 50c. Guaranteed by Tallman & Co.

TO THUNDER MOUNTAIN.

Jim Bellew at Weiser With Ten Pack Animals, Ready to Start When the Roads Open.

Weiser, Idaho, April 30.—I am on the road to the Thunder Mountain country, with 10 pack animals. I could sell out at every turn in the road, if I wanted to. Parties are offering from 30 to 50 cents per pound on freight to the mines, but cannot get any one to take in freight as yet, being afraid of the snow and mud, the roads being very bad, or none at all. There are about 3000 men here waiting to go in when the roads are open.
