FAYNE STRAHAN MOORE

OREGON GIRL WANTS DIVORCE TO MARRY REAL LIVE LORD

Her First Husband now Serving Term in Sing Sing for Blackmailing or Badgering.

Mrs. Fayne Strahan-Moore, the Oregon girl who created such a stir throughout the country two years ago, through her connection with a New York "badgering" case, is again in the public eye and wants to marry a real, live, English lord, says an eastern newspaper.

Mrs. Moore is well known all over the state, for this city was her home for many years and it was here she met her husband, who is now serving a term in the New York penitentiary. Moore circulated among the young bloods in Portland and cut a wide swath. He told all sorts of fairy stories concerning his wealthy and influential relatives. Moore came from Ohio, and through the pull of Senator Hanna, secured a consular appointment, but did not go to his post of duty. Concerning Fayne's latest movements the New York Telegraph says:

"Back again into the range of public vision rushes Fayne Moore, wife of William A. E. Moore, who, largely because of his relationship, is serving a term of 19 years' imprisonment in Sing Sing for working the badger game about three years on old Martin Mahon, proprietor of the New Amsterdam Hotel. Mahon is dead, his demise hastened by the scandal of his acquaintance with the Moore woman; Moore's whereabouts are indicated above—and Fayne is in South Dakota, suing for a divorce.

"Fayne—svelte, pretty, smart Fayne—wishes to marry an English nobleman, and she cannot well do that until she is at least semi-legally free from the convict.

"The fact that one Englishman recently went to jail in his own country for marrying a western divorcee does not enter into Fayne's calculations. She has been living in South Dakota for six months, and the papers in the case were served on Moore in Sing Sing yesterday. They contain the allegation that he is a convicted felon and has failed to contribute toward her support.

"When Moore was sent to Sing Sing, Fayne was in the Tombs awaiting her own trial. She acquired the distinction of the best dressed woman behind the bars, and, as a matter of fact, did outshine the common drabs who were, perforce, her daily companions. She was inconsolable over the severe sentence of her husband, and weepingly said she would be true to him and wait patiently for his release. After the state failed to convict her of participation in the badger work she said she would devote her life to the work of securing a new trial, or, failing that, a pardon for her husband. Her escape from following him up the river, by the way, is said to be due to the disappearance of Mahon, who left the state and could not be induced to testify against her. Freedom from the trammels of the law wrought a change in Fayne, and she went to London, whence soon came stories of the gay life she was leading followed by the announcement that she had gone on the stage as one of the Gaiety girls. Then she dropped out of sight in the rabble of women and girls who give London theaters a popular tone. Her reappearance in South Dakota is not altogether an unexpected step in her career."
