

DIRECT FROM OLD ENGLAND

We have just received the first direct import order of ever brought to Pendleton. They are made of the finest English bristles, with wax back (a new idea) which makes it impossible for the bristles to come out, as is the case with most brushes. Every brush has our name and guarantee stamped plainly on it, and is not only backed up by ourselves, but the manufacturers as well. Should any brush prove unsatisfactory, a new one will be given in its place or money refunded. They come in hard, medium and soft bristles. Where can you buy a brush like them for the money? We are making a leader of them at 35 CENTS.

WE ARE OUR BROTHERS KEEPERS.

Oregon has not always been a republican state. The democrats have elected just one-half her governors, and have re-elected for a second term the only two men ever re-elected to that office—Grover and Penoyer. In the face of republican majorities ranging from 2000 to 14,000, the democrats have rallied to the bugle call in the past, and have won the day against the overwhelming odds. Depending upon the ringing truths enunciated in their platform, and the unquestioned certainty that democrats in office will put these truths into execution, there is hope today all along the line.

Never in the history of Oregon has there been so much disgust for the method employed by warring republican factions. Every where is heard the sentiment loudly uttered against a recurrence of the tie-up of the legislature. It is a costly and disgraceful scene. Every where along the line is heard the complaint by workmen, farmers, business men and professional men, that the promises made in republican platforms are not kept. That reforms promised are not made. That the scramble for office and the war of the factions, overshadow every other consideration after the campaign is over.

Hundreds of staunch republicans have personally declared that they would not support further the cold-blooded war for office which has taken place of love of principle in republican campaigns. It has become sickening to their sense of consistency. It has become tiresome in the extreme. They love republican principles dearly as ever, but in the present disaffected condition of the ranks, it is not the triumph of those principles, but the triumph of faction and the feathering of nests. From these facts, democrats can take hope.

Democrats can offer these dissatisfied republicans the example of a clean campaign for a principle. No better inducement to vote the democratic ticket can be offered. It will appeal warmly to their sense and judgment. It will be a promise to them, that if the democratic candidates are elected, they will devote their time to the duties of office, untrammelled by the endless strife of factional quarrel which handicaps the official in every duty. The future is full of promise. The state needs a change. So long in power, a party becomes careless of its obligations. It loses the fear of the people that should nerve every public servant to his utmost.

So, go into the campaign for principle. We are not divided. After election there will be no factions to appease, no ghosts to fear. Be clean. Be above the reproach of traffic, trade or treachery. Let chips fall where they will, but be democrats to all men, under all circumstances. The democratic platform is no empty document. Every word and every line means something. It will be put into execution by its supporters in office. It was not built to "get in" on. It was built because its demands underlie good government. Its promises are not florid, but they will be sacredly kept.

Oregon has not been always republican, nor will it be always republican, unless republican methods improve. Such universal complaint means something. It is not all idle talk. Back of this disaffection in republican ranks, lies a hopeful promise for the future. It bodes the overthrow of the faction. It threatens to dethrone the political boss, and crown immortal justice in his stead. Let us welcome the republican into our confidence who is weary of the lash. He comes in the interest of good citizenship and clean politics. He comes in the interest of the future, which is the heritage of the rising generation. Let us transmit it clean, to posterity.

Let us strengthen the cause of democracy and turn only away from it when it is not what it should be. As an implement of the people, the democratic party is worth encouraging. In this campaign that is what it is. It could not be more. It should be made of service to the people, to the great, young, spirited, hopeful, generous state of Oregon, the Oregon we all love and for which we would do battle against all enemies, within and without. Let us always vote for Oregon, that we may preserve equal rights among all men and deny to the few special privileges. This is the duty of every man who has the right of suffrage. If he values his vote he will cast it for those who come nearest representing the people, irrespective of race, creed or previous condition of servitude. The spirit behind American institutions is the spirit of free, fair men. With men free and fair a government of the people, by the people and for the people cannot perish from the earth, and any other government is not worth the attention of those who stand for the rights of men and, in so standing, demand the maximum of liberty and the minimum of restraint for each individual, giving to all men equal opportunity to do something for themselves.

Those who forget these things, who ignore equal rights, who seek office for profit, pelf and power are not democrats and would tear down American institutions. Let it be said the democratic party in Oregon today comes nearer being the implement of the people than at any time in its history. It is for this reason the voters should support it, make it what it should be—the voice of the people, so that the state of Oregon may continue to "fly with its own wings," a really democratic commonwealth. It would be a great accomplishment!

FARMERS AND TARIFF.

The Portland Oregonian editorially recently said:

The farmers of Oregon and Washington do not need any argument or evidence as to the supreme importance sustained to their interests by the constant activity of flour mills. Much of the time the mills are paying more for wheat than the wheat men, and continuously they are a buoyant element in the local market. Our farmers, therefore, can understand the feeling of those Kansas millers who yesterday telegraphed to the senate of the United States that they are running on only one-third of their capacity, and that they confront an entire cessation of business unless Congress can secure more favorable entrance to foreign markets through tariff concessions on imports.

Another dispatch of concern to our farmers is the one appearing in yesterday's paper concerning the Central Federated Union of New York. This body of workmen calls upon Congress to reduce the tariff on foreign meats, so as to destroy the monopolistic power of the American beef trust. The tariff on meats is for the ostensible protection of the farmer, but in practice it operates for the advantage of the meat trust. We have a tariff on hides for the farmer's benefit also, but it aids only the packers. What the farmer gets for his meat and hides depends not at all on the tariff, but on what the packers agree among themselves to pay. It is very doubtful whether the farmers as a whole gain as much as they lose by high meat prices. Some of them sometimes reap an isolated benefit, but some of them all the time and all of them some of the time are heavy consumers of meat which they must buy in the trust-controlled market.

The fact is that whatever concerns the farmer once had in the maintenance of protective tariffs has about disappeared. They were always more or less a fraud upon him, thrown as a sop to reconcile him to support of protected manufacturing, and now they have become in many instances a positive burden. The reason is the simplest in the world. The farmer is an exporter, not a manufacturer threatened with imports. He wants markets abroad, not a wall to keep imports out. Hence it is that a tariff on farm products is practically inoperative. Nobody is going to send meat here to compete with the home product. Free trade in meat would give us the menace of foreign competition and force the trust to play fair, but it would not to any appreciable extent bring imports.

What the farmer needs is easy entrance for his products into foreign markets. Every tariff on American grain and meat in Europe lessens the American farmer's proceeds of his labor. The only way to get those tariffs cut off is to grant concessions on European manufactures coming in. Low tariffs will help the farmer. High tariffs hurt him. Tariff reduction here and abroad, will help the farmer in a two-fold way by giving him more for his products and lowering the cost of the goods he must buy. This is the gospel truth about the tariff, and it is reasonably certain that the Oregon farmer is beginning to understand it.

THE SONG OF THE SHIRT. With fingers weary and worn, With eyelids heavy and red, A woman sits in unwomanly rags, Plying her needle and thread—Stitch! stitch! stitch! In poverty, hunger and dirt, An still with a voice of dolorous pitch. She sang the "Song of the shirt!" "Work—work—work Till the brain begins to swim! Work—work—work Till the eyes are heavy and dim! Seam and gusset and band, Hand and gusset and seam, Till over the buttons I fall asleep, And sew them on in a dream! "Oh men with sisters dear! O men with mothers and wives! It is not linen you're wearing out, But human creatures' lives! "Stitch! stitch! stitch! In poverty, hunger and dirt, Sewing at once with a double thread, A shroud as well as a shirt. With fingers weary and worn, With eyelids heavy and red, A woman sat in unwomanly rags, Plying her needle and thread—Stitch! stitch! stitch! In poverty, hunger and dirt, And still with a voice of dolorous pitch,— Would that its tone would reach the rich!— She sang this "Song of the Shirt!"
