CAMPAIGN NOW ON

then told a patriotic story regarding a soldier who lost his arm in the service of his country as illustrative of the feelings with which the people should approach the ballot box.

Two parties were asking the suffrages of the people this year, the democratic party, which came up smiling year after year regardless of successive defeats, and the victorious republicans. The democrats were hopeful fellows.

Defending the republican Philippine policy, he referred to the purchase of Louisiana and Florida, whereby democratic presidents had acquired extensive territories without obtaining the consent of the governed, and had not hesitated to enforce their control over the new territory by the sword. Yet when the republicans did the same thing in the Philippines the democrats raised a great howl and invoked the shades of Jefferson and Jackson.

This party, he declared, had always been one of obstruction and had never advanced a policy which had caused any advance in the general welfare of the country. The Philippines had been acquired in the same way as had Louisiana, Florida, and California, and they must be held in the same way. The Filipinos had been removed from the bloody reign of Spain and were being educated and trained to become good citizens, but as yet they were as incapable of self government as a 4-year-old child.

He refuted the democratic contention that the present campaign was not one of political significance, affirming that the election of the republican governor would be a commendation by the people of the republican policy of progress and prosperity, while the election of the democratic candidate—even though the balance of the republican ticket were placed in power—would be taken by the nation as an acquiescence in the democratic policy of obstruction, and the sinners which had been heaped upon the army of this country by the democratic legislators.

After making a strong appeal to the people to stand by the party and show by their ballots that it was the choice of the electors, he closed with a neat tribute to Hon. J. N. Williamson, who, he declared, was a strong, manly, intelligent and good citizen. A man, who if elected, would certainly give satisfaction.

At the close of the Judge's address Mr. Williamson briefly denied certain stories which he said had been circulated regarding his connection with the employers' liability bill, which he declared to have been a house measure, discussed and defeated in the house and never brought before the senate.

During the evening selections were rendered by the Pendleton quartet, consisting of Messrs. John Collier, M. A. Rader, A. J. Owens and Gerry Kimball.

It was also announced that William J. Furnish, C. W. Fulton and two or three other republican candidates would address the voters at the opera house on Monday evening next.

WILLIAMSON INTERVIEWED.

Tells of His Trip Through the Interior Counties of the District.

Immediately after the meeting Tuesday night an East Oregonian man interviewed Hon. J. N. Williamson, who talked entertainingly of his recent trip through Harney and other southern counties where he has been stumping the district in company with Judge Webster.

"Leaving the railway at Sumpter," said Mr. Williamson, "we went by stage to Canyon City, and thence through the country to Drewsey and Ontario, a total distance of over 300 miles.

"We had crowded houses throughout the trip and while in that section I saw something entirely new in the line of campaigning, the people of Burns sending their brass band of 14 pieces and nearly 100 enthusiasts in 18 carriages through the district with us for over 100 miles, as far as Drewsey. During the trip we had some great times, addressing two and three meetings daily.

"Furnish sentiment is growing rapidly through the interior counties and I found the republican ticket gaining ground, this being due in a great measure to the splendid work done there by Judge Webster, who made some of the best speeches I have heard.

"I am more than pleased with my reception in Pendleton and must say that here I found one of the best halls and one of the easiest audiences to address which I have met on my entire trip.

"I am confident of election myself and believe the entire republican state ticket will go in."

Mr. Williamson left at 8 o'clock this morning for Antelope, where he will address a meeting this evening, going from there to Astoria, where he speaks tomorrow night.

Democrats at La Grande.

George E. Chamberlain, democratic candidate for governor, addressed an enthusiastic meeting in La Grande last Monday evening, and according to the Chronicle of that place, his reception was a pleasing augurer of his success in the coming election.

The evening was opened by a torchlight procession with nearly 800 in line. In addition to Mr. Chamberlain, prominent democrats addressed the meeting and were listened to with rapt attention, telling points being heartily applauded.

Most flattering reports are being received from the interior counties, and the La Grande newspaper is convinced that Mr. Chamberlain and the democratic ticket will surely win in that county.

After the Battle.

"Life is a battle," said the moralist, "in which some are wounded."

"And bank cashiers," interrupted the jokesmith, "are usually reported among the missing."—Philadelphia Record.
