There was a good deal of difference in the baseball games of Friday morning and afternoon. Taylor, the slim cayuse from the backwoods, who pitched the game in the morning, kept the Palousers guessing and consequently, with Rhea behind the bat, Knox's home run and the good fielding done all through the game, the Indians had a walkover.

But in the afternoon it was different, and unfortunately the difference was the other way. Wilner, the lad from Germany, split the elm for the Redskins and the farmers from Colfax found him an easy mark. While the result of the game was not the pitcher's fault, it looked bad for him from the onlookers' point of view and the scorers marked 12 safes against him. Wilner can pitch good ball but the Palousers were onto his "easies" and batted going and coming, and it was the good fielding especially that of Dickie Knox, in deep center, that kept the score down as low as it was.

R. Ripley and Woods were the battery for the Alfalfa Tossers and while Catcher Woods cannot hold Rhea a candle, he did not make many bad errors and the horsehide shooter Ripley, made it hard for the Indians to tell just what they were going to do when he got that overhand swing to his right arm and sent it out toward the home plate. The Indians only got five hits off him.

The fielding of the visitors was better than the average and several good running catches were made. Although they had a little kick coming at the umpire, they are jolly good fellows and did not get out and "beef" as some other teams that have played on the local diamond.

Ziegler, the second man at the bat for the Indians, succeeded in crossing the home plate safely and a goose egg was marked against the visitors in the first inning. Consequently it looked good for the fans and they were sure of another victory, but in the next the Palousers sent Bannard over the home plate and from that on the game was one-sided. Pendleton persisted in selecting goose eggs, of the hard boiled variety, while the rooters were compelled to see the scorer mark up tally after tally until the husky farmers had five to their credit.
