The military forces at Manila observed Decoration day as a holiday. There were impressive services at the American cemetery, though the bodies of only a few soldiers are now buried there. The American Club decorated the graves of the civilians. It was thought inadvisable to declare the day a public holiday.

A 2-year-old Indian tiger was killed in a fight with horses on a circus train while en route from Goshen to Poughkeepsie. The tiger escaped from its wagon while the train was in motion and crawled into a car containing 30 draught horses. A fierce battle ensued, the panic-stricken horses plunging and kicking at the savage intruder. When the train reached its destination the tiger was found dead and mangled under the hoofs of one of the horses. Six of the horses were badly scratched and bitten.

PACIFIC NORTHWEST NEWS.

WORLD OF FASHION

MANY THINGS IN THE LINE OF GOWNS.

Nothing so Complete as a Pure White Silk Muslin Gown—How It is Made—The Cherry Trimmed Dress and Its Trimmings.

New York, June 2.—Although the season is now well advanced, fashion's horn of plenty seems not to have been perceptibly diminished, and there are many things in the line of gowns and their details that are yet new.

Thin fabrics are ever an active province for improvement, and the variety that has been added to batistes and muslins within the last few weeks is really marvelous. The most recent innovation in batiste shows a lace effect, which figures largely in combination with silk and satin foulards, peau de soie, taffeta and other silks, for vests, revers, berthas, collarettes and other portions of the bodice and sleeves.

In silk muslins there is a new shade of soft ecru, with embroidered dots of all colors scattered over the surface. A gown of this sort is specially attractive over cream or white silk and has a style that is unequalled by any of the brighter colors.

But for simplicity, nothing is so complete as a pure white silk muslin gown laid in transverse tucks and made without a touch of other trimming. The skirt has the tucks, half an inch wide, stitched in slanting effect and arranged to meet evenly at the front. Below the knees there are two graduated flounces of the same material, which are in turn decorated with very tiny ruffles, hemstitched, and gathered through the center, to simulate the effect of ruching.

The bodice is laid in narrower tucks, which run round the figure. While not specially becoming to the woman of full figure, no design of the year is more charming for women who are tall and slender.

The neck is daintily finished with a stock of silk muslin which fastens at the back under a rosette of the same material.

Though expensive when one has to pay to have it done, no trimming is a more general favorite in Gotham than fagoting for gowns and dainty accessories. The woman who has time and talent to do her own sewing, however, will find it inexpensive and very effective. It is similar to the catch stitch which our grandmothers knew so well how to make, and is easily accomplished, when once one catches the idea. The popularity of fagoting can easily be traced to the prevailing craze for hand work upon gowns.

Narrow bands of taffeta joined by fagoting, made attractive collar bands and many of the most elegant separate skirts of the season are also trimmed in this way. With these skirts handsome bodices made entirely of bands of silk or canvas joined by fagoting, garnitured at the waist and neck with a band of crushed panne, or one of silk embroidered in French knots.

A pretty fad of the year has been the bringing out of new colors almost simultaneously with the fruits they imitate. Just when the delicious red strawberry appeared in the markets, there was shown among the new, soft silks the most delightful shade of scarlet known as pastel fraise. Now, though it is not new, the cherry of the millinery shop boldly rivals the fruit of the garden, and only a connoisseur is able to point out the deception, for there are some who really wear cherries as ornaments for the hair, entwined in leaves of green enamel. An expensive fad, but new, and that is the main thing during the monotonous days of summer.

The Cherry Trimmed Dress. Then there is the cherry trimmed dress. A notable design is of grass lawn embellished with cherry colored ribbon, Irish guipure and a touch of black here and there to give the necessary air of chic to the ensemble. The skirt is plaited and plaits are held down till near the hem by appliques of lace.

The bodice is covered with the Irish guipure behind, and ends in a shaped tail-piece at the back. At the front there is a vest of the lace over a plaited foundation of lawn and opening over this vest are revers of silk appliqued with medallions of lace set upon small figures of cherry colored ribbon. A girde of the same ribbon, narrow at the front and widening for several inches, at the back encircles the waist.

It is noticeable the furor with which the wearing of pearls is being revived. The jewels are fashionable in every setting, in pins, chains, earrings and finger rings, while almost as many are noticed in lognettes, the clasps of chateaines and bracelets. They are seen, too, outlining the monogram on some of the handsome parasols. The finest come from India and surpass all others in lustre. But creamy white pearls are not the only ones which are fashionable, for there are some very pretty ones of black, placed in effective settings. There are imitations, of course, and very clever ones and the woman who can not afford the genuine article does not hesitate to affect the counterfeit. Except to the experienced eye, the observer is seldom any the wiser.

Pompadour Pearls.

The nearest to the "real thing" as it is expressed in common parlance, are pompadour pearls, deftly fitted over a tiny piece of mother-of-pearl. They are seldom used in chains, but for earrings and finger rings they are much in favor.

The time for replacing the walking skirt of cloth by the linen design is marked by a new walking skirt which is an agreeable compromise between the demi-trained modes of last season and the abbreviated golf shape of this. The latest skirt is made with a shaped flounce of linen or crash or duck, as the fabric may be and this is trimmed with bands stitched on in fanciful design, or with simply several rows of stitching.

These skirts are particularly smart for morning wear, and are serviceable. The same is true of the basket linens. The latter are new and no doubt will prove great favorites. They are firmly woven in texture without being thick or heavy, and being cool, are just what one needs for warm weather.

Summer fashions for children are particularly pretty. Everything seems designed with a thought for comfort as well as style, which makes it better for both parent and child. Many of the materials are serviceable and will last throughout the season with even constant washing. Brown Holland comes under this head, and trimmed with insertions and edging of embroidered muslin, makes frocks for small girls, and some larger ones, are of the wash variety, and in many instances the trimming is confined to ruffles of the same material, or substituted by a lace which will not perish if given the water cure.

Hat of Soft Straw.

The hat of soft straw, with wide crooping brim is almost invariable for the small girl. This is trimmed, sometimes with a full wreath of white daisies, or with wild roses; again it is decorated simply with a huge bow of black velvet ribbon fastened at the back and finished with long streamers reaching to the hem of the skirt.

Little girls of very tender years, have their frocks made very low-waisted, the skirt being hardly more than a ruffle. This may consist of fine embroidery, or if the upper part is in silk, the skirt is of deep Valenciennes lace placed over a frill of the silk.

As was the case last year, the fashionable idea in children's hosiery is the white stitching and this is to be accompanied this season by white shoes.
