PIONEERS ELECT OFFICERS.

Dance to the Strains of Music and Have a General Social Time.

William Martin Encampment No. 1, Pioneers of the Pacific, elected the following officers at their regular weekly meeting in Hendricks' hall Wednesday night:

Mrs. Mary Knight, past commander; Mrs. Anna Wickersham, commander; Isaac Jay, captain; Mrs. Laura Randall, chaplain; Mrs. Louisa Lampkin, scribe; Mrs. Hattie Standfield, treasurer; Mrs. Isaac Jay, north scout; Mrs. Ira Hughes, south scout; Mrs. Delos O'Hara, ancient guide; Mrs. Tillie Carlson, messenger; M. Moorehead, sentinel; Charles A. Maskrey, picket.

After the election of officers a social hour was spent in dancing to music furnished by Kirkman's orchestra. Refreshments were served.

The officers elected last night will be installed the first Wednesday night in July. This will be a public installation and a dance and banquet will be given.

HOBOS GETTING THICK.

Four in Police Court This Morning—Were Ordered to Leave Town.

This is the time of year when the spring crop of the genial hobo begins to come to town and strike for the back door of the homes of the citizens for a "hand-out." While Pendleton has been unusually free from this type of humanity for the past few months, owing, perhaps to the disposition of Street Commissioner Fee to catch them and place them on his chain gang, they are now beginning to show up and this morning four were up before Police Judge McCourt for begging and being drunk. None of them had any money and as there is little work to do on the streets now, the judge suspended their sentence of five days in jail and told them to get out of town. One lone Indian who had been drunk, was fined $5 and placed in jail in default.

"PLANT TREES."

So Said a Great Man—the Father of Arbor Day.

It is a great thing to have given force and direction to a good idea. J. Sterling Morton is dead, but his work and words in one great line at least will live and grow.

"Plant trees." This was the motto which Mr. Morton uttered as often as he could and, best of all, he gave it practical application.

He died just as nature was putting bud and leaf on the trees he loved so well.

Thousands of trees stand as monuments to his wisdom and forethought.

His "Arbor Lodge" home in Nebraska is an illustration of the fact that he believed in teaching by example as well as by precept.

He was the father of the idea of Arbor Day, and the good his work and words have done and will do in clothing out prairies and hillsides with useful and beautiful trees would be hard to overestimate.

Mr. Morton must have been an appreciative admirer of Shakespeare's lines which tell of

Tongues in trees
Books in the running brooks
Sermons in stones,
And good in everything.

Mr. Morton was a practical farmer and won renown as a statesman, but we think his grandest work was in founding Arbor Day. Take his advice:

"Plant trees."

Nutritive Value of Food.
In some ways the most important feature of the work done has been the devising of the respiration calorimeter by Professor Atwater and Professor Rosa, of Wesleyan. It is a copper chamber seven feet long, four feet wide, six feet four inches high, in which a man is placed and in which he stays for a period of from five to eight days. He is given opportunity for exercise, unless it is to be a rest test, and he lives, so far as possible precisely as he would live in the outside world. The object is to determine what proportion of the food he eats is accepted by the body for use, and what portion is rejected. By means of the calorimeter apparatus—the heat measuring apparatus—conveys the thought perhaps clearer—it is possible to tell how much energy or heat is developed by the man while in the cage. Every unite or particle of heat is measured as it passes out of the chamber, and so absolutely accurate is the apparatus that he may not rise from his chair without the extra energy thus generated being recorded. Each particle of food eaten is measured and tested with the utmost exactitude, and every particle of waste is registered with absolute accuracy in order that the precise amount of material utilized by the body may be determined.

Without going further into the details of this fascinating service to the world, it may be said that the apparatus is being copied for similar scientific institutions on both sides of the ocean, with the result that the investigations carried on by the director of this station are being made the basis for the determination of the dietary of many public institutions. These results are daily being applied to the feeding of the army and navy of the United States.—From "The New Agriculture," by W. S. Harwood, in the June Scribner's.

IMPORTANCE OF ALASKA.

Five Events Which Have Changed The Country for the Better.

Since 1896 five events have occurred that wholly change conditions in Alaska for the better. (1) In that year the Klondike gold discoveries were made and in 1897 and 1898 a great rush to and through Alaska began, resulting in a doubling of the population and in an output of gold from the Yukon region to date of $75,000,000. (2) In 1898 the Philippine islands were acquired by the United States, giving importance to the direct route along the Alaska coast between North America and the new possessions. (3) In 1899 gold was discovered on the beach at Nome and this carried 30,000 people to this part of Alaska and resulted in an output of $5,000,000 in gold annually, or more than twice as much as all Alaska had previously yielded. (4) The Alaskan salmon fisheries in their infancy in 1896, have grown in 1902 to great companies, capitalized to $20,000,000 and with net earnings last year of more than $2,000,000 and employing 10,000 men. (5) Two railroads have been constructed in Alaska, one of which, in the extreme southeast, costing $4,000,000, earned last year over $3,000,000 net, and the other, in the extreme northwest near Nome, a little road five miles long, which earned $80,000 net. (6) Coal fields formerly superficially known, have been explored and investigated, while new ones of great value have been discovered.—Harrington Emerson, in The Engineering Magazine for May.

At bedtime I take a pleasant herb drink, the next morning I feel bright and my complexion is better. My doctor says that it acts gently on the stomach, liver and kidneys and is a pleasant laxative. It is made from herbs, and is prepared as easily as tea. It is called Lane's Medicine. Lane's Family Medicine moves the bowels each day. Price 25c and 50c. For sale by Tallman & Co., sole agents.
