THE BALLIET CASE

HISTORY OF THE FAMOUS FRAUDULENT MINING CASE.

Balliet Is Charged With Having Used Uncle Sam's Mails to Perpetrate One of the Greatest Swindles of History—Balliet's Typewriter Tells of Money Paid to Fast Women.

The trial of Letson Balliet, the alleged mining king, who is now on trial charged with fraudulent use of the United States mails in connection with the sale of stock of the White Swan Mining Company, supposed to be operating a rich property near Baker City, is developing many interesting revelations regarding the manner in which the affairs of that company were handled.

Balliet, who was extensively advertised in the newspapers and some of the magazines as the Cecil Rhodes and Barney Barnato of America, always managed to have mentioned in these laudatory write-ups the fact that for the mere asking he would explain to anyone who desired to know, how they could make themselves as wealthy as he had become.
"He had no property to sell, or stock investments to boost for," so he advertised, but would steer those who asked his advice onto mining and other investments wherein they could be assured of making enormous fortunes or comfortable competencies, according to the amount of money which they invested in accordance with his instructions.

How the Stock Was Sold.

Despite Balliet's disinterestedness, it always developed that the very best mining investment in the West, in the entire world, in fact, was the stock of the White Swan Mining Company, operating a bonanza property which would eventually make all its stockholders wealthy. Immense quantities of this stock were disposed of to credulous investors, and finally it came to the attention of the government that there was something rotten in Denmark in connection with the White Swan.

Hence the trial. The first case brought against Balliet was laid over on account of the death of one of the jurors, and the second is now in full swing.

Some of the testimony introduced is of a decidedly racy character.
Among the witnesses brought in by the government was S. H. Rowland, who had been advertised all over the country as having made $25,000 by following the advice of Balliet. Rowland did not look like a man who had made $25,000 in mining or any other business; neither did he produce any of the money in court and his testimony was somewhat at variance with the manner in which he had been advertised.

One Man Who Didn't Get Rich.

He testified that he had not made any money whatsoever out of White Swan stock, and that his entire connection with Balliet consisted in being employed as the latter's chief clerk.
His compensation while employed in this capacity was but the bare expenses of himself and wife.
Five stenographers were employed regularly and sometimes as high as 20 on day and 12 on night shift had been at work. Each of these people was paid from $20 to $30 per month out of money received from the sale of White Swan stock. There were also heavy expenditures for advertising circulars and newspaper advertising, as high as 250,000 circulars and 200,000 editions of the Baker City Herald and the Western Mining News, having been received at the office at one time and from there mailed out all over the country at Balliet's direction. So far as he knew no funds received by the company had ever been used for development work.

Among paid advertising write-ups of the company and Balliet, paid for out of the funds, Rowland cited the cases of C. F. King, representing a newspaper syndicate, whom he had paid $3900 for one article; a write-up in Ainslee's magazine which had cost $750, and a laudatory article in the Chicago Inter-Ocean at the time of Balliet's first trial, which had also cost $750.

Balliet Incriminated Himself.

Postoffice Inspector C. E. Stewart was also on the stand and testified to having interviewed Balliet at the time the government first began collecting evidence. He told Balliet he was a postal inspector and wanted to know what authority he had for selling the stock. The accused said the books were open for inspection but that he could not show title to the property that day. Pressed for further information, he acknowledged that he had no title, but said the property had been sold at sheriff's sale and he could get title by buying in the certificate. He did not know how the people would take to the plan. Balliet acknowledged to having taken in from $20,000 to $30,000 from the sale of the stock, and said that if the plan to get title to the property failed he would refund the money he had received from stock sales. At the same time he did not know how he was going to replace what money had been expended for office and advertising expenses, as he had nothing to start on. He declared, however, that he would get the money somewhere.

The Typewriter's Testimony.

Mrs. Young, who had been Balliet's private secretary and bookkeeper, testified to having paid out various sums of money to sporting women upon receipt of telegrams from Balliet, but signed with fictitious names. She had discussed these disbursements with Balliet afterwards. Mrs. Young also testified to paying money for the support of fast women and for medical attendance for Gertrude Henderson, one of Balliet's demi-monde pets.
The Baker City Herald was also sent $300 weekly for its share in the cold blooded operations. This money all came from sales of White Swan stock.

Paid Fake Dividends.

T. H. Newby, a farm hand, testified to having invested $112.50 in 625 shares of White Swan stock, and that he received thereon one dividend of $2.50. The government will endeavor to prove that this dividend as well as others was paid from the funds of the company and not from the earnings of the mine.

In addition, sensational testimony is being introduced to show that a large portion of the revenues of the company from the sale of its stock was expended by Balliet in the purchase of diamonds, sealisks, and other extravagances for notorious women.

How the Case Stands.

Briefly summed up, the case as it now stands is that the government inspectors claim that they will show that by liberal use of the mails Balliet has operated successfully one of the greatest mining swindles in recent years, while Balliet contends that he will prove that his company has secured and is actually operating the White Swan mine and that the investment therein will eventually develop as lucrative as he advertised.

NEW SCIENTIFIC PROCESS.

A Preparation Discovered that Will Destroy the Dandruff Germ.

For some time it has been known that dandruff was caused by a germ that digs up the scalp into little white flakes, and by sapping the vitality of the hair at the roots, causes falling hair, and, of course, finally baldness. For years there have been all kinds of stimulants and scalp tonics on the market, but there has been no permanent cure for dandruff until the discovery of the preparation called Newbro's Herculicide, which destroys the dandruff germ. Destroy the cause and the effect ceases to exist. Kill the dandruff germ and you'll have no dandruff, no itching scalp, no falling hair.

Most Effective Advertising.

That advertising is the most effective which attracts the eye and appeals to the brain. Strong adjectives may be as much out of taste in an advertisement as in a bit of more aspiring literature. Exaggeration is always to be avoided. People nowadays demand sincerity in all matters of business. It is observable that all the big and successful advertisers are most careful as to their statements of fact. They realize that confidence is the keystone in the arch of trade.
Their success came of their jealous regard for their work
