Portland Wheat Market.

Portland, June 5.—The Commercial Review in its issue today says of the wheat market for the past week:

The market here remains unchanged. There is a constant demand. In spite of weaker foreign and Eastern advices, prices at this point are apparently steady. In Walla Walla, wheat trading is of a desultory character, but some selling is being done right along at from 66 to 67 cents per bushel and a few cargoes are slowly but steadily accumulating every few days. The nearness of the coming harvest and long-continued wait for a special price is wearing out some holders, and the disposition to clean up holdings is becoming more manifest from week to week, and while selling values are not at all satisfactory to a majority of the holders, the situation is more clearly understood and they are more inclined to dispose of their wheat and get ready for the new crop. Of course, a number of well-to-do farmers have been holding out for a large price, and some of them have crops of three and four years on their hands and have not given up all hope of obtaining 75 cents per bushel, and will probably carry over their grain into next season. There is always more or less wheat in every section of the Northwest, and the usual carry-over in the interior this season will be as large as in former years. Crop advices show no change previous to the few warm days. The growth of all cereals was slow, but the warm spell has doubtless given all crops a great impetus. It is considered conjectural what effect the heavy rains the last of the week will have upon the grain. If rust does not set in, as some are inclined to fear, wheat will receive great benefit from the plentiful moisture the soil has been stored with. Wheat is all stood out well and covers the ground completely. Fall wheat is 18 inches to two feet high, and the earliest is beginning to head. Barley and oats are also looking well. Quotations are without change. Club, 60 to 67¢; bluestem, 68 to 69¢; valley, 66¢ per bushel.

Wheat in San Francisco.

San Francisco, June 5.—A very light amount of trading is being done on spot, owing to the absence of buyers, who show great indifference about sampling the few offerings on this market. The export demand, what there is of it, is confined to one or two firms and these have wants well in hand. Millers are constant buyers in the interior at the usual advance over shipping grades. The crop situation is unchanged. Wheat is maturing rapidly and in the northern and central parts of the state a heavy crop is expected. Quotations for No. 1 shipping are $1.13 to $1.15 per cental; milling, $1.16 to $1.17½.

Wool in Boston.

Boston, June 5.—Sales for the past week here have been satisfactory. The market is steady and prices firm. Territory wools are very firm. Idaho wools are being rapidly cleaned up, and at prices above the market. Quotations are firm. Strictly fine, 48 to 50¢; clean, fine and medium, 44 to 46¢; staple, 52¢; medium, 38 to 40¢.

Eastern Livestock.
