THREE SAVED FROM DEATH

DROWNING BOYS HAD A VERY NARROW ESCAPE.

Two Jumped in to Save a Comrade and the Three Were Going Down Together When Rescued.

What came near being a triple drowning occurred in the Byers mill race, near Joseph Dupuis' residence, Sunday afternoon. A lot of boys ranging in age from 10 to 15 years, were playing along the bank of the race, when Lee Caldwell fell into the water. He was about to drown and Harry Dupuis jumped in to save his comrade. The drowning lad got hold of the Dupuis boy and was dragging him down, when Otto Knight rushed into the water to save the two boys. Caldwell got his arm around Knight's neck and was about to drown him as well as Dupuis, they not being able to drag him out or get loose from him. They were in the water just above the railroad bridge, and by this time had floated down to the edge of the bridge. Burk Temple climbed out on the end of the ties and caught the hand of one of the boys just as he was going down, and pulled them out.

The water is quite deep at this place, and had it not been for the young man on the bridge the boys would undoubtedly have drowned, for they were exhausted and all were going down together when rescued.

This is the place where Elzie Todd drowned last winter when on his way home from the east end dance.
