LACE GOWNS ARE THE PROPER THING NOW

They are Not Only Suitable for Dressy Wear but are Also Valuable on Account of their Washable Quality.

New York, June 16.—When you are in doubt select a lace gown. This is the advice given the women of fashion this year, for lace effects are indispensable to the woman of modish pretensions.

Not only for dressy wear is the lace gown a la mode, but it is designed for washable purposes. Valenciennes and the fine throat laces are designed upon lines which permit of the most thorough scrubbing, and as white lace is used there is nothing to fear on account of color.

One noticeable feature about the lace dresses this year is the combination of two or three guipures upon one gown. These, however, are in the more elaborate costumes. For instance, a lovely dress is made entirely of insertions of Valenciennes and Irish point, and the effect of the two laces, so different in texture, is exquisite over a dreamy foundation of Liberty satin.

Originality is shown in the treatment of the sleeves. From shoulder to wrist they are in thick Irish lace, with a voluminous fan-like arrangement of valenciennes, starting from above the elbow and joining the Irish lace at the wrist.

Nothing is smarter and at the same time more unique, than lace trimmed with cloth. In reversing the order of things in this manner, the cloth is jetted and bodices of lace so ornamented show the cloth jetted and shaped into the most delightful girdles and socks. Barettes are also used as a decoration upon these waists and not infrequently are stitches of moire seen.

For elegance at little cost washable chiffon is worthy a trial. The fabric is thin, summery and inexpensive, combining with these qualities the sheen and daintiness of the genuine article. Skirts tucked around the waistline or shirred, as the fancy may dictate, are clinging and graceful. The material has the advantage of holding its own without a lining, and every well dressed woman knows what it means to save the expense of a foundation for even the simplest gown.

A trimming which to some extent is taking the place of Valenciennes lace, is a ruching of fine net, the net being doubled and gathered to form a tiny ruching along the edge of ruffles of the dress material. Net, single fold, is also used for insertions finished on either side with the narrowest of Valenciennes edgings, and the effect is very pretty indeed.

The sleeves of wash gowns are taking on all the fancifulness of more expensive fabrics. Even the elbow design has its series of ruffles. Many of the newest sleeves are covered with little frills below which are puffs, and though the effect is the delight of the summer, it is the despair of the laundress.

Undersleeves still constitute an important part of the fancy sleeve, which may be elaborately made with lace, chiffon, embroidery and applique. Stitched bands of taffeta and velvet ribbons are special features of popular decoration in the matter of sleeves and the variety of design afforded is great.

Almost as popular as the shirt waist of this wash goods is the model in China silk. Certainly nothing is so cool and comfortable on a hot day. A smart manner of treating these waists is to stitch them all over in tucks about half an inch wide, then smooth down the tucks so they form little plaits over the surface of the silk.

Unless one specially desires the combination of lace with waists of this silk they are much more serviceable made without the trimming, for having once received the water cure, they are unable to retain their pristine freshness.

There is a tendency in the lace waists, whether of silk or cotton, to fit snugly on the shoulders, pouching in a medium fulness. The sleeves have an easy fulness at the top, though from this point there is abolutely no certainty whatever about the finish down to the wrist.

It is almost impossible to employ embroideries too lavishly upon summer gowns, whether they be for the day or for evening wear. For the latter, however, there are raised appliques in chiffon and ribbon work too fragile for use anywhere except the ball room.

For those fond of fancy work there are simple and effective embroideries which can be easily managed, such as yokes, fronts and bands of satin or taffeta worked with colored sprays, and tiny spots or French knots, which are as popular as any trimming this season.

A great deal of interest is centered just now in the correct figure, which seen en profile, is undeniably large, owing to the straight fronted corsets now so generally worn by those who dress according to the dictates of Dame Fashion. The French corset—rather the Parisian corset—with straight front, is perfectly rigid, and the lower part of the figure disappears in a marvelous, if not mysterious manner.

Among the smartest bits of lingerie shown in Gotham's exclusive shops is the armless corset cover. This reaches only to the bust line and is made on the bias so that there is only one seam and this serves also as the opening of the design. The correct shape is round and by omitting the sleeves, the contour is uninterrupted when the thin lace yokes are worn upon diaphanous frocks.

Though late in the season, a word concerning the fashionable coat is not amiss, for this is indispensable to the well dressed woman. The approved model is made of taffeta that is said to be dust as well as water proof and non-heat producing.

They were worn so universally by the summer woman on her little tours back and forth from the city until one wonders how she has ever gotten along during the period that has elapsed since the long linen dusters were en regle some years ago.

The modish tint is silver grey intermingled with black, for service, stitched with black taffeta. The coat reaches to the bottom of the skirt and around the shoulders there are three circular ruffles stitched with white silk.

At the fashionable resorts in the vicinity of Gotham, they are wearing red linen hats. Fedoras, English walking hats and golf shapes in the flaming color are trimmed with bands of plaid silk knotted loosely at the left side and run through with two quills, one black, the other red.

Ping-pong shirt waists are very smart now, they are made of pique and duck. On the left sleeve near the shoulder ping-pong racquets are worked with washable silk in blue or red or brown, as desired, and the belt shows a border of the little designs over the entire surface.

Hats come to match these waists and these are of regular sailor shape, but developed in Panama straw finished with a band of white taffeta. Instead of having a bow at the left side as is customary, the band extends in to streamers at the back which reach to the waist, the end being embroidered with ping-pong racquets.

GENERAL NEWS.

Senator Beveridge Saturday reported from the committee on territories a bill giving Alaska a delegate in congress. He also introduced a bill providing for a delegate from Indian Territory.

The general deficiency bill before congress carries $3000 for road construction and the general improvement of Crater Lake, National Park, and 2463 to pay H. A. Rands for surveys in Oregon.

The senate committee on territories Saturday decided to take up for consideration early next session the omnibus statehood bill, admitting into the Union the territories of Oklahoma, New Mexico and Arizona.

The Susquehanna Iron Company posted notices in its mill at Columbia, Pa., Saturday, granting its 1000 puddlers $4.50 per ton, and thus ending the strike there. The men were receiving $4.25 and six weeks ago struck for $4.50.

As a result of a decision rendered by the court of criminal appeals, third district, affirming the judgment of the lower court in the case of Harvey Fullerton, of Greenville, convicted of operating a bucket shop or dealing in futures, every bucket shop in the state of Texas will have to close, it is said.

PACIFIC NORTHWEST NEWS.

H. L. Smock, a brakeman on the Southern Pacific, lost his life at Brandt, a switch between Whiteson and dSully on Friday. He was caught between the freight cars.

Rev. Robert McLean, pastor of the Third Presbyterian church, in Portland, and one of the best known ministers in Oregon, has resigned his charge to begin work in Porto Rico.

G. W. Adkins was found dead in bed at Junction City, Lane county. He was supposed to have died of heart failure. He was born in Missouri in 1833 and has lived in Oregon since 1872.

Governor T. T. Gear after consulting with Superintendent J. D. Lee decided to increase the reward for the capture and return, dead or alive of the two convicts and he offered a reward of $1500 for each man.

Terrence Mallon, a traveling salesman, fell down the shaft of the freight elevator at E. W. Newhall & Co.'s dry goods establishment at Seattle, and sustained injuries causing his death in a few hours afterward. The unfortunate man fell two stories.

What may practically be termed the first gold to arrive from the Klondike this season, was brought to Vancouver, B. C., Friday, on the steamer Princess May. Approximately $150,000 in dust came on that boat. About $70,000 came down on the City of Seattle.

A woman named Mrs. Hoberg Stranger, was killed 20 miles east of Portland in a runaway accident. She was driving with her son when the horse became frightened and ran away, throwing her under the heavy wagon which passed over her neck, breaking it.

The probate court at Oregon City has made an order approving the settlement of the Willamette Pulp and Paper Company, with the administrator, releasing it from all further claims or liabilities on the payment of $250 for the death of J. E. Faulkner who was killed about three months ago by his clothing catching in some shafting.
