FOR JULY FOURTH

WHERE PENDLETON PEOPLE WILL SPEND THE FOURTH

Many Will go to Walla Walla; More to Meacham and Some Will Celebrate Right Here at Home.

"Where will I spend the Fourth?" This is the question that is somewhat agitating the minds of men, women and children of Pendleton. Many will remain at home and take in the celebration at Kine's Grove, in the east end of town; some will go to Walla Walla where is promised the greatest celebration of the nation's birth that has ever been given in the Inland Empire town; while another special train will go to Meacham; others will go to Bingham and Lehman Springs, while many parties of a half dozen or so, will go into the country and along the streams to spend the day in fishing and picnicking.

The Woodmen of the World have arranged to run a special train from the O. R. & N. depot to Meacham, leaving here the morning of the Fourth, and they, with their families, will take their lunch and spend the day among the hills surrounding that place.

They will be met at Meacham by Woodmen from La Grande on a special train and a large crowd is expected. An informal program will be arranged and such sports as the "tug of war," foot racing, chopping and sawing contests will be had.

This picnicking party is not to be held down to members of the Woodmen and their families but all who wish to go will be welcome. The Hell band will accompany the picnickers.

At Kine's Grove is promised a fine program, consisting of foot and horse races, pie-eating contests, the proverbial greased pig, music and dancing, fireworks and a balloon ascension. The celebration will begin there the morning of the Fourth and last until the evening of the 6th. All the comforts of home are promised, such as places to get meals and a bar where all kinds of drinks, soft and hard, will be dispensed.

NO TRACE FOUND

Disappearance of Victor Schilling from Portland Remains an Unsolved Mystery.

ENGAGED SLEEPING BERTH FROM SPOKANE TO SEATTLE

But it is Not Known Whether or Not He Used It—Suggested That Heavy Debts Caused His Disappearance—Crooked Deals Alleged.

Portland, July 2.—Absolutely nothing is known here as to the whereabouts of Victor Schilling, the disappearing city ticket agent of the O. R. & N., and there seems to be no likelihood of any trace being found as his movements since he left Spokane are a profound mystery. It is learned from Spokane that he engaged a berth in a sleeping car going from Spokane to Seattle but whether or not he occupied this is not known. It may be that he took the trip to Seattle and there sailed for Alaska or the Orient, or it may be that the purchase of the berth was merely a blind.

The theory is now advanced by friends who know much of Schilling's inner life, that he has become hopelessly involved in debt through speculation in the Sumpter mining district and finding that he could not hope to pay out on the income he was receiving, left for parts unknown. His accounts and cash in Portland have been checked and are perfectly correct, so he can hardly be classed as a defaulter. The road is holding the matter of appointing a successor in abeyance in hopes of hearing from him.

The very latest rumor in connection with his disappearance is that he skipped out to avoid trouble over crooked dealings with stocks of the Golconda mine, at Sumpter, prior to the sale to Pendleton people. He induced parties in Portland to invest heavily in this stock. Then the mine was sold to Pendleton people by the Englishes, father and son, and these investors lost their money.

The Echo Robbery.

B. F. Hoyt was in the city from Echo today and tells a different version of the reported robbery of Bruce Parrish from that published in the East Oregonian last week. Mr. Hoyt says that, according to the story of Tom Campbell, Parrish went into the saloon where the robbery was supposed to have occurred. He was feeling rather exhilarated and pounded on the billiard table with his fist until the bartender threw him out, as he refused to desist. Then Parrish pounded on the side of the building with his fists until he had hammered them sore. That was the foundation of the story, the assault and the subsequent robbery being creatures of Parrish's fevered brain.

Close Votes on Governor.

The recent vote for governor was very close, but there have been other gubernatorial elections in Oregon closer. In 1878 Thayer was elected over C. C. Beekman by a plurality of 69. The vote of Thayer was 16,201; for Beekman, 16,132. In 1886 the contest between Woods and Kelly was nearly as close as the recent one between Furnish and Chamberlain. The vote for Woods was 10,283; for Kelly, 9956. Plurality for Woods, 327.

Stock on Range.

John Lofton, while riding the range on Canyon mountain between Canyon creek and Indian creek recently found several head of horses and cattle dead on the range, that from appearance had all died about the same time, having been dead a day or two when discovered. Whether the animals died from eating some poisonous weed or from eating poison put out on the range is unknown, and possibly never will be known.
