SHERIFF CUDIHEE.

Sheriff Cudihee is now the subject of general comment over the country. The reported abandonment of the chase of Tracy has led to a great deal of adverse comment on the sheriff. It is probable the first case in history where an outlaw defied officers and citizens as did the 1902 prodigy, and then made good his escape. And Cudihee did not only pride himself in being a shrewd official, but his friends thought he was invincible. He is a democrat and was elected in a strong republican county because of the fact that he had made a record.

Previous to coming to the Pacific Coast he had made a reputation as a brave and astute officer in Colorado, where he had run down and brought to justice many of the worst outlaws of the country. He was on the detective force in the city of Seattle in its worst days, if it has ever had any worse days than now. It was while he was a detective that he made an arrest that made him a reputation and elected him sheriff of King county.

Tom Blank, prior to Tracy, the most noted outlaw of the Pacific Northwest, entered Seattle one night after having committed several murders on his way to the place, and walked into a saloon which was crowded and ordered the bartender to hold up his hands. The bartender thought it was someone trying to play a practical joke on him, refused to obey the outlaw and was promptly killed by the latter. Blank rushed into the streets and was lost. Next day Cudihee was informed by the landlady of a cheap lodging house that a man had engaged a room at her place late the previous night, and although he had been up all day had not left his room, and she thought he was the murderer. Cudihee did not think there was anything in the case, but went to investigate it without even arming himself. He entered the place, and knocking at the door of the suspect's room, was received by the outlaw, who threw the door open and placed a large revolver under the officer's nose. Cudihee ducked his head, went at his man and engaged him in a life and death struggle for the revolver until a policeman was called to his assistance and they took the man, who proved to be the murderer, to jail.

Blank's subsequent trial, conviction and tragic death added to Cudihee's popularity. Blank pleaded guilty and requested that he be shot instead of being hanged, and in his anxiety to be killed in this manner, tried every means in his power to force the officers to shoot him. At the trial Cudihee and another officer sat by his side and were compelled to hold him firmly in going to and from the jail, as he made a break for liberty every time he was released. While waiting for the death sentence he made a fake revolver in jail, held up the jailer and escaped, releasing all of the other prisoners except one against whom he had a grievance. The whole country turned out as a posse and searched for him over the same ground as that traversed by Tracy. He was finally discovered and a man and boy engaged him in a duel to the death, Blank being killed outright, but not until he had wounded badly the man representing the law.

Cudihee's popularity grew from the hour of Blank's arrest and it was increased by his arrest of the child-murderer, Underwood, near South Bend, a few days after Tracy escaped from the Oregon penitentiary. But the tide is now against him for permitting Tracy to escape and for abandoning the chase. It is charged by some that he should have shot Tracy when he was within a few feet of him and had his gun leveled on him. Cudihee claims that he could not have done so without hazarding the life of an innocent man who was the unwilling champion of Tracy. If this was true, Cudihee was right.

It is not believed, however, that Cudihee has abandoned the chase. The newspapers were practically to blame for the long-drawn out chase, as through them Tracy's friends kept him posted. It is now believed that Cudihee is actively at work and it would not be a surprise to hear of Tracy's arrest or death at any time.

No blame should be attached to Cudihee so far, but if he has abandoned the chase of Tracy then he should be condemned. As long as Tracy is in a county its sheriff should never rest one moment from his trail.

The yellow journals of the East speak of Oregon and Washington's outlaw as "Tracy the Terror." The New York World says: "In the chronicles of man-hunting Tracy bids fair to take first place."

King Edward is planning a visit to Russia in September when he will call upon the czar.

EASTERN OREGON'S GREATNESS

Governor-elect Chamberlain in his address at the Gladstone Chatauqua on Lewis and Clark day, said: "Until had made an intended journey across the eastern half of the state I had not realized the vast resources and great possibilities of that region."

Mr. Chamberlain in these words said what the majority of Western Oregon people would say were they to say what is true. The people of the Willamette Valley have not yet realized the certainty of the future that awaits Eastern Oregon and parts of Eastern Washington.

That is really a great region, great in what it promises. Already the grain that pours its flood through Portland each year adds materially to the wealth of the state, and forms a considerable portion of the bread supply of the country. There are immense quantities of livestock annually sold to the packers. There are train-loads of fruit. There are increasing dairy products. There are mines. There is everything that Oregon anywhere has or produces.

Yet, as Mr. Chamberlain said, the people here are accustomed to look upon that region as given over to sage brush and jackrabbits, inhabited by cowboys and Indians, and susceptible of development only by the legerdemain of someone who has not yet appeared to pronounce his exorcism of evil spirits and conjuring of the good ones.

Without Eastern Oregon, Portland would be sadly lacking the business with which to grow and become the great city it is destined to be. With out Eastern Oregon, Portland would not be a city of 100,000 people with promise that it will become one of a half million before many decades elapse.

It is demonstrative of the breadth of observation possessed by the governor-elect, that he has come to a realization of these facts. It indicates that he will broaden the scope of things at Salem, and permit his vision to range over territory larger than that comprised within the limits of the Willamette Valley.—Portland Journal.

THE REPUBLICAN PARTY.

The republican party at present presents the strange case of an organization profiting by its own misdeeds. The very refusal of its leaders in congress to grant relief to Cuba gave Mr. Roosevelt an opportunity to appear in one of his most attractive roles and immensely enhance his popularity.

Granting that Mr. Roosevelt will be nominated in 1904, which nobody doubts, it would not be an exaggeration for Senator Elkins to boast that he is indirectly responsible for the popularity of the candidate and for much of the strength of the party. There is a paradox for you.

Mr. Roosevelt's party offends the public, but in so doing gives Mr. Roosevelt an opportunity to greatly please the public and thus to return to the party more than the popularity than it threw away. The president spoke to an enormous crowd at Pittsburg on the Fourth of July, and was greeted with the greatest cordiality. In the course of his speech he spoke of his regret that reciprocity had not been embodied in statute or treaty, and added, "But it will be, just as sure as fate."

The means he intends to employ to bring about this desirable state of affairs are not apparent, but his work may not be so hard when the best senators have heard from their people.—Collier's Weekly.

A Nightmare

Gives point to the fact that excessive or irregular eating disturbs the digestion. Nightmare or night hag has its day time correspondence in the undue fullness after eating, with the belchings and sour or bitter rising so often experienced after too hasty or too hearty eating.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery cures dyspepsia and other diseases of the stomach and its allied organs of digestion and nutrition. When these diseases are cured, the whole body shares in the increased strength derived from food properly digested and perfectly assimilated.

"Your 'Golden Medical Discovery' and Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy have been of great benefit to me," writes (Prof.) Pleasant A. Oliver, of Viola, Fulton Co., Ark. "Before I used the above mentioned remedies my sleep was not sound; digestion bad; a continued feeling of misery. I now feel like a new man. Any one in need of medical treatment for nasal catarrh could do no better than to take treatment of Dr. R. V. Pierce. I know his medicines are all right in this class of diseases."

Sometimes a dealer tempted by the little more profit paid on the sale of less meritorious medicines will offer the customer a substitute as being "just as good" as the "Discovery." It is better for him because it pays better, but it is not as good for you, if you want the medicine that has cured others, and which you believe will cure you.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets cleanse the clogged system from accumulated impurities.
