A MAN'S DOWNFALL

STORY OF THE FLIGHT OF ARTIE ANDERSON.

He Has Been Seep in Portland, Where He Fled With a Fair-Haired Damsel of the Undercrust.

Since the disappearance of Artie Anderson on Tuesday morning, the 22d instant, several very interesting facts concerning him and his escapades have come to light.

As stated a few days ago, Anderson has lived in Umatilla county for the past six years. He was a highly respected citizen and had many friends who were greatly surprised at his sudden turn down hill. He was trusted. Banks and private individuals had loaned him money at different times and he had always paid up. He was clerk of the school district at Juniper and handled all the funds. The first report of his disappearance was to the effect that with him had gone $155 of school money, but this has since been found to have been false. Prior to his leaving town he went to the county treasurer and turned all the school money in his possession over to the treasurer.

Was a Short Trip Down.

It was only a few months ago that Anderson began going to the bad. He had a nice home, wife and one child and was apparently happy. He was not a man who drank, did not live high or visit sporting places. A few weeks ago he received word from his parents, who resided in California, stating that his mother was not expected to live. It was just prior to the commencement of harvest and Anderson made the excuse that he could not leave home to go to her bedside. Instead of going himself, he sent his wife.

Another Woman in the Case.

While she was in California the mother died. During the absence of the wife and baby, Anderson became a frequent visitor at one of the sporting houses. He would remain there days at a time, spending money right and left. This was kept up for several weeks, and the police, as well as the proprietor of the house he visited, became tired of his actions and the officers interfered. Anderson then concluded he would leave town, and with him went the fair-haired damsel to whom he had been paying attention. It seems that Anderson fell violently in love with the girl and spent money lavishly on her. Either his money or love for Anderson caused the woman to go with him.

A Man in the Road.

This woman went by the name of Alice Dandley. She has a farm in the valley not far from Portland, and has it well farmed and stocked.

It seems that she and Anderson arranged to go to Portland, dispose of this farm and leave for parts unknown. To this plan, however, there was an obstacle. This was another man, Mr. Dandley, one of the owners in the "Turf" saloon in Portland, who is claimed to have been the woman's lover. She claimed that Dandley had some interest in the farm. She put up the money, perhaps, to make the purchase and he managed the business and shared with her.

Off for Parts Unknown.

The plan, as near as can be learned, concocted by Anderson and Mrs. Dandley, was that they go to Portland, buy off Dandley's interest in the farm, then get all the money they could out of it before they skipped.

Anderson stayed at the place where the Dandley woman lived Monday night and next morning left town on the east-bound passenger train which went through at 5:45 o'clock. He only went east, however, until he met the west-bound overland, when he changed cars, came back to Pendleton, was joined at the depot by his paramour and they together went to Portland.

Injured Wife Returns.

Mrs. Anderson came home Friday evening after Anderson left town. She was accompanied by his father, who, it is said, is worth considerable money. She did not know of the disappearance of her husband until she arrived home. When she had learned what he had done she was very badly broken up over the affair. Saturday night she and the elder Mr. Anderson went to Portland to try and find her husband to settle up their property affairs if possible. Mrs. Anderson declared she would never live with her husband again, but was very anxious to see him and have a settlement in some way. They are expected to return home today.

urday night she and the elder Mr. Anderson went to Portland to try and find her husband to settle up their property affairs if possible. Mrs. Anderson declared she would never live with her husband again, but was very anxious to see him and have a settlement in some way. They are expected to return home today.

Fall Hard to Explain.

The escapade of Anderson is one of those unexplainable things a man occasionally does. Why he should have so suddenly taken to drink and then run off with another woman is a mystery. He was quite well fixed, or would have been, had he remained and harvested his crop. He has been renting here from Dr. C. J. Smith, and has 800 acres of grain in this year, which is now ready for the harvest. While he was quite heavily in debt, this crop would have paid him out, it is said, and he would have several hundred dollars left to his credit. It is understood that his crop, stock and farming machinery was mortgaged for something like $6000.

His Affairs in Shape.

When he left town he was under no obligations greater than he could have paid off after harvest. He went away with between $600 and $800 in cash, but left all matters so that no criminal charges could be preferred against him and it is now said that no effort will be made to detain him or force him to return to Pendleton. His stock and farm machinery, which was under mortgage, has been foreclosed upon and is being advertised to be sold by the sheriff on August 5th.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucus lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucus surface.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by Catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.
