THE STOCK WAR

MORE TROUBLE REPORTED ON GRANT COUNTY RANGES.

Said That Another Big Band of Sheep Has Been Fired into and Several Were Killed—Particulars Are Scarce.

The Spokesman-Review of Monday, contains the news of another bloody episode which has taken place in Grant county's spectacular stock war. The scene of the last killing was on Murderer's Creek, a remote and inaccessible district of the interior of the John Day country. While particulars are meagre, the story is that several head of sheep were killed by infuriated cattle men and residents of that region near where the slaughter occurred. It was, as usual, an outside sheep man who suffered this time. The sheep belonged to J. C. Moore, of Mount Vernon. Reports vary as to the number slaughtered, one report being that several hundred were killed while others say only a few dozen died at the hands of the stock men who believe this is the only way of dealing with outside invasion.

News is Hard to Get. Where the shooting occurred is many miles from any telephone or outside communication, and is many miles from any settlements and it will be several days, and perhaps weeks, before the particulars will be obtainable.

Another story goes that while herders of William Mitchell were ranging a band in a district just invaded, a short distance over the Umatilla county line on Camp Creek, hidden men, supposed to have been settlers or cattle men, fired several shots at the herders. None of the shots took effect, however, and it is thought the firing was done just to intimidate the men in charge of the sheep. The men struck camp with their band and no violence was attempted other than the first shooting.

The above are the only outbreaks in the Grant county ranges since the massacre of Baker's and Mascall's flocks of sheep last month. Affairs are outwardly quiet again, but it is said that a bitter undercurrent is running and other serious trouble may break out at any time.

Question is Unique. The range question of the interior is one of the most unique of the country. It is said that the resident cattle and sheep men have about decided to stop their fighting with each other and lay for the outsider. This will be a case of the lion and lamb lying down together in order to catch the other fellow—the outsider. In fact, it is said satisfactory agreement has already been reached between the resident stock men and hereafter all efforts will be turned toward the non-resident who invades the country with bands of sheep.

Situation Does Not Improve. Anyway, the situation does not grow any better from the outsider's standpoint. There is enough range in Grant county, it is said, for all of the resident stock if the other fellow can be kept out. This is the question that agitates. The public domain belongs to no man and the outsider argues he has as much right to it as the other fellow. If the resident stock men had full control of the ranges of their home counties they would be all right. There is grass and to spare to keep all the resident stock fat and in good condition, but frequently it is eaten off by the outside herds until the situation becomes serious and before fall there is little feed for anything. This, the resident stock men say, is what makes them angry.

Rains Made it Bad. The feeling was intensified this year because rains and bad weather made shearing late in Grant county, while most of the outside sheep men got their clip off before the bad weather came. Then the foreigners hurried their sheep into Grant county, while the home stock men were still ranging right around winter quarters. That gave the foreign stock man all the best of the range, both to eat off at the beginning and in choosing districts accessible to water and to other good range. The home stock man was indignant in consequence.

Similar in Crook. Grant county stock conditions are unique to a certain extent. There is nothing like them in Umatilla, Harney or Morrow or Gilliam. In Crook a similar state of affairs exists. There has been an equal amount of trouble with as much shooting this year as in Grant.

IOWA REPUBLICANS GATHER.

Political Leaders of That State in Convention at Des Moines.

Des Moines, Ia., July 29.—All of the Iowa congressmen and nearly every republican politician of prominence in the state was to be seen about the Savery hotel today. For an off year, the interest manifested in the republican state convention is something unusual, and more particularly as there are no contests of moment to attract attention. The gathering will be called to order in the auditorium at 11 o'clock tomorrow morning by Congressman Walter I. Smith, of Council Bluffs. Of the 1233 delegates most of them had arrived before noon today, bringing with them a host of other visitors interested in the gathering.

Des Moines is playing the host in royal fashion and nothing is being left undone to add to the comfort of the visitors. An awning has been stretched half a block along Fourth street and under its shade the prominent party leaders are to be seen today discussing the outlook and between times listening to the music of the famous Iowa State band.

Harmony will be a distinctive feature of the convention. Iowa does not elect a governor this year, but all the other offices are to be filled, from secretary of state down to railroad commissioner. The naming of the ticket, however, attracts little attention as the incumbents almost without exception will be renominated. This applies to secretary of state, auditor, treasurer, attorney general and judge of the supreme court, leaving only the minor places on the ticket to be contested.

Last Federal Convict Pardoned. Michigan City, Ind., July 29.—By virtue of a commutation of sentence granted by President Roosevelt, Isaac Sloan, the last federal convict in the Indiana state prison was given his release today. Sloan was sent up for life in 1895 from Kentucky for killing a secret service agent.
