THE SURE WINNER.

Merit has long been claimed as a sure winner in the end. It has in the past often been spoken of in a sentimental strain than otherwise; because the speaker thought it ought to be a winner, because it was right that it should win. It has long been considered the proper technical conclusion that it should win, and yet it has not always won.

But day by day it is becoming the winner. It is the case in all lines of business, trades and professions—more so with newspapers than any other class of enterprise. The merchant who keeps shoddy goods, a dingy store, does not advertise, has passed. He may have been a success in former times when the people had to patronize him, when there was no competition, but that time has passed. There is competition, sharp and persistent in every line. The old timer, the good fellow, the man who is everybody's friend, but who remains in the rut, who has dropped out of the procession, may wonder why his friends pass him by and patronize a stranger.

If it is a merchant it is because the new competitor keeps a better grade of goods, keeps them in more attractive shape, advertises them, treats his customers courteously, does business on up-to-date methods—in short, is a new century business man.

If it is a lawyer, it is because he is posted in law, has a comfortable office, a good library, may be found at his office when not engaged in active work, is prompt to attend to business, takes your case through the formalities of the law with precision and safety, makes prompt remittances and is always found guarding his client's interests, has abandoned the old slipshod manner of handling things, and depends less on display in the court-room and convivial sociability, but more on strict up-to-date business and legal methods.

If it is a physician, it is because he is learned in his profession, keeps posted by reading his medical journals, has practical sense, is always sober, kind and patient, treats his patients with the care and interest that a mother would treat her child, is equipped with modern medical contrivances and surgical instruments, treats his patient in the most humane, but most effective way—is the model up-to-date physician.

If it is the newspaper, it is because it gives the reader what he wants. Gives the news that is news in the most attractive and readable shape. The cost is not thought of by the reader. He wants the news. If it is about a volcano on the other side of the world he wants all of the news about it. He does not care what it costs the paper. If it is an episode in the jungles of Africa he wants to know it all and know it quickly; it does not matter what it costs. The paper first to get it and put it in the best and most readable shape will get his patronage. His enemy may be behind the paper that does this and his friend may run the other paper, but it is not a question of friendship; it is news he wants and news he is going to have. It is purely a case of merit.

It is so in every avenue of trades and professions. Merit is no longer a question of sentiment; it is a fact, it is a sure winner.

A dog pound is a good institution. The killing of worthless dogs is proper. But the central portion of the city is not a proper place for a pound, and the shooting of the dogs in the pound in the heart of the city is not the proper thing, especially when it takes three or four shots to kill one dog, or even to shut off his mournful howls.

Accounts still appear in the press dispatches of a desultory warfare at some points between cattlemen and sheepmen. That is not the way to settle matters, and those who engage in it will generally get the worst of it, both in the fight and in getting relief.

Who will be the next hero of the hour? Tracy is getting stale, it is thought Jeffries won the championship in a fake fight and the boy who killed his antagonist in Portland with his bare knuckles is in jail. Another freak is in order.

The Oregon Daily Journal is the first paper ever published in the Portland field outside of the Oregonian building that received mention in the Oregonian. But this mention was made in the Oregonian in the way of an advertisement duly paid for.

The entire state press, excepting the Oregonian and Evening Telegram, irrespective of politics, has spoken favorably of Mr. Jackson's purchase of the Journal, and predicts his success.

The Walla Walla editor who could not tell a bloomer girl from a man must have had them pretty badly. He may be trying to perpetrate a joke, however.

Should any of the present aggregations drop out of the Inland Empire Baseball League, it might be that the bloomer girls could be induced to fill the vacancy.

A man, aged 130 years, recently died in San Francisco. He was a foreigner and could not read the San Francisco papers.

The newspaper cuts of Jeffries since the battle do not give him the appearance of having engaged in a "fake" fight.

The "Terrible Turk," the cannon-ball catcher, the merry-go-round and the bloomer girls all came and have gone. Next!

The annual bicycle-stealing industry is now on in full blast. The wheel-thief is getting in his work all over the country.

Do not get our Chamberlain mixed up with the English Chamberlain.

SELF-RAISING STOCK.

The O. R. & N. Company recently issued a new prospectus of Oregon, Washington and Idaho. It was edited by the late Colonel Pat Donan. It contains several neat illustrations, among them two wheat shipping scenes near Pendleton, one "Between the Walls of 100,000 Sacks of Wheat" and the other "141,000 Sacks of Wheat Waiting Shipment."

Following are extracts taken from an article entitled "Self-Raising Livestock."

"With a climate of perpetual mildness, no cyclones, no blizzards, over 50 varieties of indigenous grasses, and streams and fountains of pure mountain water everywhere, distilled from glaciers and eternal snows, the Columbia River Empire is a stock-raiser's paradise. No housing, no sheltering, no feeding, care or attention of any kind. Nothing to do but round up the self-raised cattle and horses to brand the calves and colts, and pen the sheep to shear them. They themselves do the rest and revel in the very fatness of plenty. "Butchers in the Umatilla, Walla Walla and Lewiston regions complain that the sheep, raised on the wild bunch-grass grow too large for their uses. A 275-pound sheep was one of the prize-winners at the Oregon state fair in October, 1900. A mutton chop from a 250-pound sheep looks like a rib steak from a small Texas steer. Oregon has 1,638,720 sheep, assessed at $2,331,668, that last year yielded 18,228,276 pounds of wool, worth $2,163,393—or within a trifle of their own total valuation. "The cattle keep fat on the ranges all the year round, 2-year-old steers ordinarily pulling down the scales at from 1200 to 1400 pounds. Heppner, Or., takes premiums with a 2200-pound thoroughbred Shorthorn cow—half the weight of a fair-sized elephant. Oregon has 384,499 cattle, assessed as worth $4,754,522."

The advanced condition of things demands specific qualification in some calling, trade or profession. This is an age of specialists.

EASY WORK

"Love lightens labor," the saying runs, and in a sense it is true. But even love cannot lighten labor or make it easy for the woman who is in constant suffering from inflammation, bearing-down pains or other womanly diseases. The one thing that can make work easy for women is sound health, and Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is the thing that will give sound health to sick women. It cures womanly diseases which cause weakness, and cures the backache, sideache, nervousness and other ills which are the result of womanly diseases.

"I suffered from female weakness for five months," writes Miss Belle Hedrick of Nye, Putnam Co., W. Va. "I was treated by a good physician but he never seemed to do me any good. I wrote to Dr. R. V. Pierce for advice, which I received, telling me to take his Favorite Prescription and 'Golden Medical Discovery.' When I had used the medicines a month, my health was much improved. It has continued to improve until now I can work at almost all kinds of housework. I had scarcely any appetite, but it is all right now. Have gained several pounds in weight. Dr. Pierce's medicines have done wonderfully well here. I would advise all who suffer from chronic diseases to write to Dr. Pierce."

"Favorite Prescription" makes weak women strong, sick women well. Accept no substitute for the medicine which works wonders for weak women. Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser is sent free on receipt of stamps to pay expense of mailing only. Send 21 one-cent stamps for the paper-covered book, or 31 stamps for the cloth-bound volume. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.
