THE HERMANSONS.

Some Facts About a Popular Organization.

The new lodge of Hermansons, just organized under most favorable auspices in this city, by the name of Eintracht Lodge, has created widespread interest in German circles throughout the state.

This new lodge was installed under dispensation of the grand lodge of the state, and the grand lodge officers, consisting of George Lautenschlager, grand president; William Schelbacher, grand vice-president, and William Herman, grand secretary, visited Pendleton in person to confer the impressive rites and degrees of the order.

The Hermansons, of which the new lodge is a branch, is the largest German secret society in the United States, being represented in every state of the Union. Besides the cultivation of the moral and intellectual status of its members, its objects are fraternal and benevolent, aid in time of sickness and death, with also an insurance feature which has added greatly to the growth of the order. There are at present six lodges in the State of Oregon; four at Portland, one in Astoria, one in this city, and another soon to be organized at Eugene.

The Hermansons are not confined to men only. There are four women lodges in Portland and one in Astoria and these, with the rights and privileges of the general organization, have amongst them some of the most enthusiastic workers of the order.

The next grand lodge session will be held in Astoria the 16th of September next, where German citizens from every part of the state will be gathered as representatives, and it is to be hoped that Pendleton will be selected in the near future as the meeting place of this important gathering.

The officers of the new lodge are as follows: Joseph Basler, ex-president and deputy; Valentine Strobel, president; Conrad Platzoeder, vice-president; W. O. Hamish, first secretary; Nicholas Joeger, second secretary; Fred Walters, treasurer; Joseph Basler, August Stanger and Fred W. Koeppe, executive committee; Edward Besthorn, sergeant-at-arms; Herman Rellinghaus, inner watch; Anton Stanger, outer watch; Anton Nolte, William House and Peter Medernach, finance committee.

TEACHERS' EXAMINATIONS.

County Papers Will Be Finished Today and the State Papers Saturday.

The regular quarterly teachers' examinations are being held at the Pendleton Academy. The examinations began Wednesday and will conclude Saturday afternoon.

The examinations for county papers will be concluded this evening, but the state applicants will not finish their work until tomorrow evening.

There are 25 applicants; 20 for county papers and six for state. The names are: Anna Mortensen, Anna Konroth, Edith L. Gibson, K. B. Peck, Clara Roberts, Irene H. Nolan, Stella Marple, Louella Marple, Edith Perry, Catherine A. Hughes, Rose B. Carrier, Mary Dorr, Stella Lieuellen, Retta Sanders, Ruth Baker, Bertha Baker, Edna Marston, Stella O'Hara, Alma Barrett, Mrs. Frank K. Wells, Messrs. Walter Ely, Nathan Moore, D. Lynn Gubser, A. P. Habet, S. A. Darnell, A. Campbell.

Butchers' Plan to Beat Food Trust.

The co-operation of the retail butchers of New York in an abattoir of their own to free them from the tyranny of the food trust, is the most promising anti-trust move that has been made in a long time.

If the railroads were not in league with the packers who form the trust it would be obvious that the scheme could not but succeed. There is no reason, apart from the complicity of the oads, why the butchers of New York should not turn cattle and hogs into beef and pork as cheaply as the men who are responsible for the exorbitant price of meat, and so form a check that would effectively prevent the sort of famine that was engendered by the Armour's, Swifts, Cudahys and Libbys.

When the price of meat is raised above what the poor can afford to pay, the smaller butchers have to go out of business.

The experiment is an excellent one in any event; if the railroads by their illegal discrimination make it fail, there will be an object lesson in favor of the government ownership of the national highways so sharp that nobody can miss it.

The two reforms that will effectively put a stop to the exactions of the food trust are the removal of duties on beef, mutton, pork and veal, and the suppression of the already illegal concert of the railroads.—Hearst's American and Journal.

It is reported on good authority that the Northern Pacific Railroad Company has recently spent $3,000,000 to get into the city of Portland.

Hops sold at Eugene yesterday at 22 cents. It is claimed that this is the record price for a number of years.

Bad Temper and Marriage.

Our philosophic friend Minister Wu has been talking on that favorite theme of philosophers—marriage. "No man should marry if he has a bad temper," he says.

But what about woman? Like the trained diplomat that he is, Mr. Wu confines his injunction to bad-tempered men. His admiration for American women has been so often and generously expressed that he could not now be expected to even suggest that there are any of them lacking in that even amiability of temper which helps so much to make married life "one grand sweet song."

Not that he wholly overlooks the feminine side of his proposition, for he quaintly asks, "Is there any woman without a temper?"—thereby implying the opinion that a woman all meekness and quite devoid of spirit is as undesirable as she is rare. Shakespeare thought so too, and embodied the ideal woman with a temper, not bad but just a trifle trying, in Beatrice, whom we are nevertheless left to infer made Benedick a most lovable wife.

Mr. Wu's maxim, restricted in its application to the masculine sex, is not to be quarrelled with. Not that all women any more than are all men—Blessed with temper, whose unclouded ray

Can make tomorrow cheerful as today, but even when nearest to the type of Xantippe or of the shrew that Shakespeare drew the bad temper of a woman is not so abominable as that of a really bad-tempered man. Not without reasons are women called the "softer" and men the "sterner" sex; and in that fact lies full justification of Mr. Wu's one-sided prohibition against the marriage of bad-tempered men.—New York World.

The New Pacific Cable.

President Roosevelt and attorney-general have agreed as to the conditions upon which consent to the construction of a Pacific cable is to be recommended to congress. As that body has already declined to permit the laying of a government cable there is no doubt that it will sanction the line as a private enterprise.

Of the more than 170,000 miles of cable lines now in use there is none that crosses the Pacific. The new line will complete Puck's "girdle round the earth." It will wake Guam from its sleep of centuries, link Hawaii closer with the continent, stimulate trade and facilitate the spread of intelligence in China, Japan and the Philippines.

The line will effect a great money saving. At present a message received in San Francisco for transmission to Hong Kong must cross this country, be cabled to Europe and thence forwarded by one of the company lines of the huge Eastern Telegraph Company. The proposed Pacific cable, whose charges congress will probably limit to 50 cents a word will reduce the cost of messages to the far East to something like one-third of what they now are.

The cable should be sanctioned. It will prove of public value and importance.—New York World.

Some of the Queer Things Seen There One Day.

Heher are some of the odd things seen on Chestnut street, Philadelphia, shortly before noon the other day:

A shirt waist man. A man wearing an overcoat. Another carrying a palm leaf fan. A woman wearing a boa, accompanied by a little boy wearing sandals and no stockings. A "drunk" in evening clothes. A beggar woman wearing diamond (?) earrings. Sixty-three men gazing at a window display of corsets. A messenger boy running. A girl wearing a man's Panama hat. A sunburned man carrying a string of fish. A colored man in a baseball suit, followed by a crowd of colored admirers. A dude buying a cent's worth of ice cream from a street vender. A man pushing a lawn mower over the pavement.

She Was a Knocker.

She had a little hammer, She used it with a will, She knocked at everybody— They couldn't keep it still.

She knocked about her neighbors If they were friends or foes, She knocked about the table, And knocked about her clothes.

She knocked at hubby's smoking; About his snoring, too; She knocked about his whistling, And so, perhaps, would you; At last the Reaper claimed her, Her course on earth was run; Her husband then considered Her knocking days were done.

But hubby went one evening To see a spirit show, Where always in the gloaming, The spirits come and go; He heard a spirit knocking— "My wife," he said, "I'll bet!" Now isn't she a wonder? By gosh! she's knocking yet!" —Exchange.
