MILTON MELONS GO EAST

PRODUCE OF VALLEY FARMS SEEK FOREIGN MARKET.

While the Local Dealers Are Supplied With Fruit and Vegetables Coming All the Way From California.

Few people in Pendleton are aware of the fact that by far the greater part of the fruit, vegetables, melons and other produce which they consume during the summer season is shipped to this city from California, and other southern states, while nearly all the similar produce raised at Milton and other gardening centers within a short distance of this city is shipped out of the state to supply Minnesota and other eastern markets. Yet such is the case.

This peculiar state of affairs was brought out today by a remark made by a local dealer to the effect that he could not get fresh melons, grapes, etc., from Milton, on account of the high prices asked by the dealers and growers at that point and an investigation revealed the queer state of affairs stated above.

It appears from inquiry among local dealers that it is almost impossible to secure Milton fruit and vegetables for distribution in the Pendleton market, as the shippers claim they can realize much better prices by sending their produce east than by selling it closer to home.

Milton grapes, which are just now ripening, are very scarce in the local markets and those who handle them at all are forced to pay 25 cents per box above the price of California grapes for the privilege. Melons are said to cost nearly half as much again for the fresh Milton product as for those picked green in California and ripened while en route, and all other produce runs about the same, green corn being about the only summer delicacy which can not be secured more cheaply from California dealers than from nearby growers.

The reason for this peculiar state of affairs is hard to find, none of those who are feeling the effects of its existence being able to explain the why and wherefore, but all being unanimous in stating that such a condition exists.

JOURNAL LOVING CUP.

George B. Streeter, of Portland, Jumps Ahead of Frank Frazier.

George B. Streeter, of Portland, is now ahead in the race for the Oregon Daily Journal's loving cup. Up to two days ago Frank Frazier, of Pendleton, was in the lead, but today he is just 88 votes in the rear. Mr. Streeter is credited with just 9446 votes as being the most popular Elk in Oregon nor Washington, and Mr. Frazier has 9360. The next man in the race is B. B. Rich, of Portland. He has 1549 votes. Twenty-three other names are entered in the race, but apparently Frazier and Streeter have the lead so far that the others will stand no show in catching up with them.

Sunday's Picnic.

BEAUTIFUL HOME.

Julius Gurdarian is the Possessor—Beaver Damaging Orchard.

A visit to the country home of Julius Gurdarian is worth the time of any man. An East Oregonian representative, in company with Frank Earnheart, drove out to his beautiful home on Birch Creek Friday afternoon, and spent several hours enjoying his hospitality. He lives on the place formerly known as the Furnish property, and has one of the most convenient homes in the country. Not only has he a comfortable home, but he is surrounded with everything that goes to make life pleasant. Mr. Gurdarian has all kinds of the finest of fruits, vegetables, etc., but his main business is stock raising. He now has over 200 head of fine hogs and is fattening a carload for the market.

War on Beaver.

Mr. Gurdarian has declared war on a bunch of beavers living in the creek which runs through his place. These animals are a menace to his property. They have not contented themselves with cutting down native trees and dragging them into the creek to dam it up, but have cut several fruit trees. Mr. Gurdarian says notwithstanding that there is $50 fine for killing beaver, he is inclined to make war on these pests with a vengeance.
