TURKEY-RED WHEAT.

Kind That Made Kansas Famous, Does Well in West.

Turkey-red wheat, the kind that made Kansas famous, has been introduced into the Walla Walla valley, says the Union, and it is hoped by those who were instrumental in bringing it here that next season will witness a large number of fields producing it. It is a variety that is strongly productive on the lighter land and 90 acres on the farm of Fred Coyle yielded 40 bushels to the acre this year. It is essentially a winter wheat and must be planted in the fall. Dement Brothers' Company was instrumental in securing the trial of grain here.

Turkey-red wheat will give a better yield to the acre on the lighter lands than does the bluestem of the Walla Walla valley. It is a grain that requires less moisture than bluestem, and for that reason is better adapted to the land upon which it is advocated to be planted. On the soil of lesser density in this county it will produce 40 bushels where bluestem would only bring 30. That is the claim of those who have tried it and who claim they know whereof they speak.

While Turkey-red is a new wheat in the Walla Walla valley it is by no means an experiment. It has been grown in different parts of the United States for a number of years and always with excellent results when properly seeded and planted on ground suitable to its needs. It would not yield well on the heavier loam land of the foothills, but on the Eureka flat and lower Touchet farms it is claimed to work far better than either club or bluestem.

Turkey-red must be seeded in the fall throughout the winter, otherwise it will not head. It cannot be sown in the spring and bring forth a crop. The stalks will fall to head and die down, to spring up again the next year and produce bountifully. This has been learned from experiments. Those who have tried the new grain in this section express themselves as highly pleased with the results shown.

They also set aside $1500 to be awarded in premiums for the best display of agricultural exhibits, full details of which will be arranged later.
