CORNUCOPIA HELD UP.

Men Resembling Actors in Umatilla Bridge Hold-up, Working Down the Line.

The following account of a hold-up near Cornucopia, taken from the Baker City Democrat, indicates that the men who held up Pendleton citizens at the upper Umatilla bridge are operating east of this place:

Two bold, bad highwaymen held up Charles Keller, the proprietor of the saloon at Cornucopia, yesterday afternoon and relieved him of nearly $300 in cash. The news of the affair was wired to the city last night by the correspondent of the Morning Democrat at Carson, which is distant four miles from Cornucopia.

Mr. Keller was driving from Cornucopia to Carson with his wife and when near the latter place two highwaymen, masked and heavily armed, suddenly bounded upon the scene and demanded from Mr. Keller at the pistol point his well-filled wallet. Mr. Keller coughed up. He hardly thought it was safe to do otherwise. His purse contained nearly $300 and this the robbers appropriated without ceremony. The bandits were well masked and could not be recognized. One of them is described as being a heavy-set, chunky man, while the other is a slender fellow.

A short time later in the afternoon John Moore and a Mr. Moffit were driving to Carson with a wagon when their horses balked. The men got out of the wagon to whip the horses, when the masked highwaymen took a few shots at them. No further attempt was made to rob Moore and Moffit, if indeed such was the robbers' purpose.

DO THEY APPRECIATE IT?

Do Farmers Realize What Advantages They Have Over Old Timers?

Farming used to be the worst sort of drudgery and the hardest kind of work. Following a pair of mules and holding a heavy plow; backing off stumps, and pulling from under roots, gee-hawing over the field from early morning until evening's dim twilight at the rate of an acre per day, says the Farm and Ranch, made the farmer feel like death would be a release from inherited misery.

He had no time to read and was too tired to think. This work lasted throughout the cropping season. And then the harvesting by hand was the most trying time of all, and the threshing and cribbing, wound up the work of the year, just when the work of the next year must be begun.

Such was the mill that ground the labor out of the farmer some years ago, and the writer of this has been through it, from alpha to omega.

Do farmers generally appreciate as they ought to the relief that has come to them through the agricultural progress of recent years? Most of them do, but some do not.

Now we ride the disk plow, the planter, the harrow, the cultivator and the weeder, and when the day's work is done, and seven times as much is done, and seven times as much as the old method, the farmer may leave the field earlier, hitch up his team to his phaeton and take his family out for a drive and return, when the old-time farmer is getting his team from between the rows where he and they have wrought the whole day through.

The farmer who makes use of the advantages within his reach, is as fresh and bright at sunset as at sunrise, and has time to read and think and recreate. The farmer who does not make use of the advantages within his reach, is a valid object of sympathy.

Voodoo in New Jersey.

The arrest and punishment in Orange, N. J., of a negro preacher charged with practicing Voodooism is a curious instance of the survival in an educated community of the blackest superstition. The idea that a sighing lady can draw a man's love by chewing "king root" and "spitting round the house" is as grotesque as it is pathetic.

Yet, upon reflection, is the survival of the belief in love-charms so very remarkable? There are probably half a million people in New York who have at least a half belief in the "evil eye." There are thousands who waste their hard-earned money upon clairvoyants and astrologers. There are those who try to read fate in "dream-books," who stealthily touch if they can a humpbacked man's bulging anatomy before visiting the race track, who have faith in rabbit's foot magic. There are people who believe it unlucky to walk under a ladder—as it may be if the ladder falls down—or to spill salt, or break a mirror, or sit at a table with 12 others, or start a journey on Friday.

After all, the "conjuh-man" and his victim are in fairly good company, which includes a large proportion of the human race.—Exchange.

The PEOPLES WAREHOUSE

THE LEADERS

Lake County Sheepmen.

Advices from Australia tell of a terrible drought in South Wales and Queensland, which has devastated the sheep ranches. Millions of sheep have died and men formerly considered wealthy have been compelled to seek employment. Samuel McCaughey, a sheep king, of Australia, lost over a million sheep of his herd of one million and a quarter, and other large herders have been equally unfortunate. This will be a reminder to the sheepmen of Lake county—though not of such magnitude—of the opposite, the terrific winter of 1889-90 which has been feared so many times since. Many of our woolgrowers who went to the wall in the memorable time, are again "on top," fortune having favored them.—Lake County Examiner.

Shatters All Records.

Twice in hospital, F. A. Gullledge, Verbena, Ala., paid a vast sum to doctors to cure a severe case of piles, causing 24 tumors. When all failed, Bucklen's Arnica Salve soon cured him. Subdues inflammation, conquers aches, kills pains. Best salve in the world, 25c at Tallman & Co.'s drug store.
