THE MODERN DRUGGISTS PENDLETON

WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 27, 1902.

The coal miners are still making a hard fight. They may fail, but they will have the consciousness of having made a hard fight.

It looks as if Gage would get a cold deal in the California republican convention. Apparently Gage is a grafter, and that class has thrived already too long for California's good.

Fires have become so common in Pendleton that the people rush out upon hearing any kind of a bell ring. It may not all be charged to fire-bugs, but it is certain that many of the fires cannot be accounted for.

Teddy, the irrepressible Teddy, is receiving a grand ovation all along the line. Teddy is looking ahead. He expects to be the next president, and if a republican is elected, Teddy will doubtless succeed himself.

Pendleton now has one of the best baseball fields in the Inland Empire League, and being ahead in the percentage and still retaining the crack players of the league, there is no reason why she should not carry off the honors. Nothing but an accident can prevent it.

In these days of successful robberies and hold-ups it is astonishing that the Idaho train robbers should have failed. They were either very green in the business, or they permitted their program to miscarry in some way. Hold-ups seem to be the most profitable way of raising something money now, and the man that fails is regarded by the army of Tracy imitators as a rank frost.

The thefts committed by the Elks' officials demonstrates the fact as has so often been done by officers of fraternal orders, that a great many "good brothers" are simply grafters and scoundrels. Yet a brother of one of these orders is seldom prosecuted. The fraternal orders will eventually come to that point where they will not show so much charity in case of a brother's weakness and will punish him as they would any other criminal. It is the very class of rascality that should be punished to the full limit of the law. The officer of a fraternal order who would rob the order would be the very man to join the order for the purpose. A thief is a thief wherever he may be, and none should escape under the cloak of fraternalism.

The spirit to put down the hold-ups is growing every day. It is a new feature of operation and it takes new tactics to put it down. There have always been hold-ups, but criminals have not been so glib with their guns heretofore. The average thug now would rather kill a man than to get his money. The criminals have apparently reached a state at which they seem to have lost all feeling for humanity and the murder of a human being is looked upon as lightly as the killing of a snake. When they have reached that point, it does not seem too harsh to hear a good citizen say they ought to be shot down like dogs, or strung up to the first tree or object that will support them when once caught. It would not be following the law, but the remedy may be the only feasible one at present.

It is stated that the negligence in attending to the old brewery fire has cost the city about $200 more than it should. The fire department responded on the first call, put out the fire and left it in a safe condition. Since that time two alarms have been turned in at a cost of $100 each to the city. There has been gross negligence somewhere. While it is the duty of the fire department to respond and put out a fire and leave it in its dying stage to be looked after by the individuals interested, it is not its duty to stand by for weeks and protect it. The fire has been smoldering in the sawdust of the brewery for all of this time, and it is claimed that it could have been put out by removing the burning sawdust in a few hours' time at a few dollars outlay, yet it was necessary to call out the fire department yesterday morning in order to prevent the fire from getting a new start. It is reported that the owner of the property is quarantined at home, while others state that he cannot remove the burning saw dust until the insurance men adjust the matter. Whatever the cause of the delay may be it has been at a great and unnecessary cost to the city.

Southern Oregon is now having her range troubles. If stockmen and sheepmen would keep their equilibrium for a short time longer, it is possible that the whole matter will be satisfactorily arranged. Uncle Sam will find the remedy, even if it does take time. When he does finally come down on the matter in earnest some of those taking an active part in keeping up disturbances may be sorry that they spoke. The man in the wrong never gains a permanent footing, but the man in the right cannot fail to eventually come out right.

OUR INDUSTRIAL SUCCESS.

Some time ago the British Iron Trade Association appointed a commission to visit the United States and investigate the industrial conditions that prevail there. The commission has returned and made its report a copy of which has been received by the state department at Washington. It is as nothing of encouragement for the British hope of continued rivalry with us in productive labor, but for us it is one of the most gratifying tributes ever paid to American industry by a foreign commission.

In the first place the statistics of pig iron production are themselves sufficient to tell the story of our progress and our victory. In 1865 the United States produced 832,000 tons of pig iron, Germany produced 760,000 tons while Great Britain produced 4,819,000. From that year on both Germany and the United States gained on the British output, though that output was itself increased. In 1900 Great Britain reached her maximum of pig iron production with a total of 8,960,000 tons. That was certainly a handsome increase over the output of 1865 and showed that the British had put in 15 years of strenuous endeavor. Germany, however, had worked faster and in 1900 was almost equal to Great Britain, her product for the year being 8,386,000 tons. Both however, were eclipsed by the United States, which in that year produced 13,789,000.

The most significant feature of the statistics, however, is that with 1900 Great Britain and Germany reached their maximum and the output of each in 1901 was less than in the previous year, the British product falling to 7,750,000 tons and the German to 7,737,000 tons. The product of the United States, however, went forward with a bound and in that year distanced all rivalry by surpassing the product of Germany and Great Britain combined, the total being 15,878,000 tons.

In explaining the extraordinary increase in the important industry of iron production the commission notes the vast natural resources of iron coal and kindred minerals in this country, but does not attribute our success wholly to them. The report states and illustrates how the natural inventiveness of the American has enabled him to apply to the operations of production and distribution a wealth of original ideas and methods that are yet little known in Europe. It is also made manifest how on land, on lake, on river and on canal the American people have applied their minds to the solution of the conditions and problems of cheap transport until they have at last attained a level of rates and charges such as we have hardly had any experience of on the other side of the Atlantic.

Furthermore it is pointed out that we have not achieved our triumphs without the expenditure of much thought, toil and money; nor without taking great risks at times in the development of new markets. Thus we have fairly earned our reward, or, as the commission puts it: The American people have labored strenuously for many years until labor, ingenuity and enterprise have become their most distinguishing characteristics. When one has appreciated all the Americans have done for themselves it is neither natural nor reasonable to grudge them the success which has attended their labors.—San Francisco Call.

THE NEW AMERICA.

Complete figures furnished by Commissioner Sargent, show that during the fiscal year ending on June 30, 648,743 immigrants landed in this country, against 487,918 during the previous year. That this total nearly establishes a new record, the following table, giving for each recent decade the maximum and minimum year shows:

1862	89,207
1869	352,569
1873	459,803
1878	138,469
1882	788,992
1886	334,203
1892	623,084
1898	229,299
1902	648,743

Except during the civil war, immigration has been heaviest during the second and third years of each decade. With uninterrupted prosperity and fewer men unemployed than usual, the year upon which we have now entered may surpass even 1882 as a banner year for immigration. Is such a result desirable? That depends upon the immigrants, upon their character, where they go, what they do.

In some undesirable ways records were broken last year. The greatest number of undesirables ever known was deported—5429. In spite of this vigilance, the greatest number who could not read or write were admitted—165,105—or more than 25 per cent of the whole number.

Immigrants are most needed to build up the states of the far West. To help in the grain fields where for years there have not been men enough to harvest the crop. But of last year's immigrants more than two-thirds stayed in New York, Massachusetts, Pennsylvania and Illinois; they came to the cities, not to the farms and forests and mines.—New York World.

KIDNEY TROUBLES.

Mrs. Louise M. Gibson Says That This Fatal Disease is Easily Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I felt very discouraged two years ago. I had suffered so long with kidney troubles and other complications, and had taken so much medicine without relief that I began to think there was no hope for me. Life looked so good to me, but what is life without health? I wanted to be well.

"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound cured me and made me well, and that is why I gladly write you this, and gladly thank you; six bottles was all I took, together with your Pills. My headache and backache and kidney trouble went, never to return; the burning sensation had left altogether; my general health was so improved I felt as young and light and happy as at twenty."
—Mrs. Louise Gibson, 4813 Langley Ave., Chicago, Ill.—$3000 forfeit if above testimonial is not genuine.
If you feel that there is anything at all unusual or puzzling about your case, or if you wish confidential advice of the most experienced, write to Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass., and you will be advised free of charge. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has cured and is curing thousands of cases of female trouble.
