HAVE WOMEN INTUITION?

One Writer Says They Have Never Shows It In Literature.

Literature is the final expression of human thought. If women can lay claim to a special faculty of intuition, why do they, not manifest it in their writings? Intuition, if it means anything, means the faculty that gets down to the germ of actions and characteristics and focuses external traits into a central verity recognizable to the general public. Now, there are more female writers than male. No woman poet has ever written an inevitable line, a line that flashes spontaneously out of the unknown and casts an illuminating light upon the abyss. Woman has added practically nothing to our stock of familiar quotations. Take down your Bartlett or your anthology, and you may be surprised to find that from Mrs. Browning to Mrs. Meynell women have never coined a phrase which has passed into the common currency of speech. Mrs. Browning has indeed written fine lines, but nothing of hers can be said to have become a household word.

Nor has any woman novelist created any character that is generally recognized as typical. George Eliot has come closest with her Tito Melema and Mrs. Poyser. You would appeal only to the educated few if you described a person as a Tito or a Poyser. But call a man a Don Quixote, a Micawber, a Dogberry, a Falstaff, a Colonel Newcome, a Bilfil, a Parson Adams or Bob Acres, call a woman a Mrs. Malaprop, a Becky Sharp, a Beatrice, a Diana Vernon, a Meg Merrilies, and even the illiterate will mentally classify the individual as you wish him or her to be classified.

"Ah, but," you say, "in real life women are the true intuitions. They size up a man or a woman at a glance. They are never mistaken when they trust to their instincts."

I can only testify to my own experience. I have not found that women's snap judgments of character are imbued with any special verity. They form likes or dislikes quicker than a man does because they are quicker on the trigger of conjecture. They can only be one of two things, right or wrong. If time proves that they are right, as they must be in 50 per cent of cases, the right guess is remembered and treasured up by the slower minded man as an extraordinary instance of intuition. The wrong guess is forgotten.—William S. Walsh in Era.

To Save Tempers and Collars.

"You button your collar the wrong way," said the salesman as he was selling neckwear to a customer.

"How is that?"
 "You have buttoned the right side last. Now, when you go to take it off you will have to tug at the end of the collar and crumple it, because you can't get a proper hold of it, but if you had the left end on top you could get it off easily, then loosen the collar behind, and the right end could be easily detached. That's why men have so much trouble taking off well laundered collars. Remember to fasten the right side first and then the left, and you will save your collars and your temper."

"I never supposed there was a right and a wrong way of putting on collars."
 "Try both ways and you will see."

A Novel Feature.

A water merry-go-round is to be one of the many new and novel attractions at the Spokane Interstate Fair this year. The general plan of the boat merry-go-round will be something like this: A circular canal six feet in width and two feet deep will be dug. The diameter of the space enclosed will be 70 feet and the length of the canal will be about 220 feet. In the center a post will be erected from which 10 arms will extend seven or eight feet from the ground. A boat will swing from each arm and rest on the water. Each boat will carry six passengers. The boats will rest on 18 inches of water, and as they will only draw about six inches the gunwale of the boats will be on a level with the ground, or a little above it.

Among the many interesting achievements of human inventive genius accomplished during the decade which has elapsed since the World's Fair at Chicago, and which will be seen at the World's Fair in St. Louis in 1904, there will be the dirigible balloon, the wireless telephone, the transmission of sight by wire and the telephoning from railway trains and trolley cars in motion.
