KLAMATH INDIANS.

They Make Annual "Run" to Lakeview to do Their Shopping.

The annual "run" of Klamath Indians to Lake county—like the fall run of suckers in Lost river—has started up, and promises to be larger than in former years. The Indians come to Lake county after their winter supply of flour, vegetables and fruit. These aborigines usually stop over a few days in Lakeview to trade—buy rich colored garments at the stores, sell or trade their baskets, swap lies and gamble with their neighbors, the shiftless and indolent Plutes. The squaws always attend to the trading or selling of baskets, and the bucks do the lying and gambling.

When these Indians come there is always a rustle and bustle among the Lakeview ladies to secure the finest baskets for ornaments. Last Sunday one particularly fine basket was on exhibition, and several of our townswomen were on hand to secure the prize. The price asked was ten dollars. All sorts of prices were offered, less than the mark, but refused by the redwoman who had put in many days of weary toil on the ornament. Finally, a well known townswoman who is up to Indian ways and customs, and knows how to catch the squaw fancy, held up to the admiring view of the ornament worker a couple of discarded dresses of the proper complexion, and at once the basket was hers, much to the disappointment of other townswomen who coveted it.

This explains one trait of the Indian character. The dresses given in exchange were gaudy and rich in color. A squaw is like a mad bull, who always dashes at a red petticoat. Red is the prevailing color among the Indians and the more red worn by the squaws the more they are admired by the bucks and hated by their sisters who haven't the red.

Nearly everybody is familiar with a few words of Chinook Indian language and when these Klamath Indians arrive they are usually greeted with "Kihime six." The Indians will reply in very good English (as it's spoken) "howdydo."

RUSH OF CHILDREN

139 NEW PUPILS ARE IN ATTENDANCE.

Some Grades Already Crowded—High School Begins Work With 53 Pupils—Many More Expected by the End of the Week.

The Pendleton public schools and Academy opened their doors for another nine months' term this morning. Some classes of the public schools are already crowded and it is estimated that the attendance for the first day is nothing to what it will be within a few weeks. The total enrollment this morning was 729 in all of the branches of the public school. Of these 53 are in the high school department and 639 in the general departments. This is the largest enrollment for the first day in the high school ever before since Pendleton began as a school town, and President E. B. Conklin expects to have 60 in this department by the end of the week, as several of the high school students are still in the harvest fields winding up their farm work.

By the end of the week the total enrollment in the public schools will reach at least 850. One teacher in the high school department is still to be secured, but the others are all in their places today. The school starts off with the brightest prospects ever in its history. Professor E. B. Conklin is again at the head and he has, in his past three years with the schools, proved that he was the right man in the right place. A very profitable school year is anticipated.

The Academy opens with 140 students. This is no increase over the number enrolled the first day of last year, but many more students are expected to arrive by the last of the week, so that with the beginning of next week a full attendance will be on hand.

The teachers are all in their places and the school is starting off in excellent shape.

Otto, Karbia and Francis Martin, children of Mr. and Mrs. R. Martin, who have been spending the past three months' vacation at Ukiah, returned Sunday morning. They were accompanied home by Mrs. Bond and daughter, Miss Bertha, with whom they have been visiting. Mrs. Bond and daughter will spend a week here, the guests of Mrs. Martin.

William Duran, well known in Umatilla county, where he resided in the seventies, is in Pendleton, but will leave this evening for Athena, where he will visit his daughter, Mrs. Oliver Beck. Mr. Duran now resides in Okanogan county, Washington, where he went three years ago from Morrow county. Mr. Duran is just back from Morrow county, where he spent two weeks visiting his old friends.

T. K. Beard, of Modesto, Cal., is in town. Mr. Beard is a former Umatilla county citizen and owned the place where F. E. Judd's fine home now stands, north of the river. He is here looking after his farming interests, which he has in the county. Mr. Beard is interested in the Modesto irrigation projects now under headway and says that things are very lively there at present. He is working a large crew of men and says he never saw men so scarce and hard to get.
