Farewell Reception.

A farewell reception was tendered Rev. John Uren Monday evening at the Thompson Street M. E. Church. A large attendance of his congregation and several from other church congregations of the town were present. The guests presented Mr. and Mrs. Uren with a silver service and Rev. Uren was presented with a handsome gold-headed cane to show the appreciation of the work done here during the past five years, while he has been connected with the Pendleton church. Addresses were delivered by Rev. W. E. Porwine, Rev. R. W. King, Rev. R. J. Dixon and Rev. G. W. Rigby, and much of the evening was spent in listening to instrumental and vocal selections. Refreshments were served.

Lost in New York.

The big scenic production, "Lost in New York," will be seen at the Frazier theater next Saturday evening, September 20. For the interpretation of the play the management offers a company of a higher order of excellence than is usually identified with this form of attraction. The scenic display includes the great East River, historical Battery Park, Blackwell's Island, with its desolate prison and insane asylum with their inmates and attendants, a practical steam launch, row boats, and electrical fountain with real running water. Seats are on sale at Frazier's book store.

Not Doomed For Life.

"I was treated for three years by good doctors," writes W. A. Greer, McConnellville, O., "for Piles and Fistula, but when all failed, Bucklen's Arnica Salve cured me in two weeks." Cures Burns, Cuts, Corns, Sores, Eruptions, Salt Rheum, Piles or no pay. 25c at Tallman & Co.'s drug store.

Cheap Excursion to Baker City.

On September 18th the O. R. & N. Co. will sell tickets, Pendleton to Baker City and return, at $3.75. The attraction being Baker's street fair and carnival. These tickets will be sold for trains arriving at Baker City on September 18th only, and will be limited to expire September 19.

HOMESTEADERS LOCATED.

W. F. EARNHEART, Association Block.

and visiting his brother, J. V. Tallman, of the Tallman & Co. drug company.

J. V. Tallman and Harry Folsom returned last evening from the mountains, where they had been hunting. Mr. and Mrs. Frank Myers left this morning for their home in Sumpter, after spending a few days here.

N. H. Cotrell was brought down from Prescott, Wash., in a critical condition last evening. Mr. Cotrell had been in the Prescott country harvesting, and was suddenly taken ill and obliged to come home.

Will Wyrick was in town yesterday from his father's ranch, 20 miles north of town. Their harvesting crew was laid off on account of the wind. He says harvesting is almost completed all over the country and another week will not see an outfit running anywhere.

John Town, of Great Falls, Mont., is in town attending the Woolgrowers' convention. Mr. Town is one of the large sheep owners of Montana. He has control of about 25,000 acres of range in Northern Montana, which he holds by homestead rights and lease. Last spring he purchased 10,000 sheep from Joe and Anton Vey, of this county, and has just purchased $900 lambs and 1500 yearlings this fall, which he will take to his range in Montana.

THE WOOLGROWERS MEET

Both sides said that their people favored a reserve. Regulation and allotment are favored there. Certain sacrifices should be made. This is necessary now.

Morrow County.

Mr. Hynds said that while his county was not in the proposed reserve, said that the stockmen were in favor of fixing a certain date for all to go into the mountains, but that then the first to arrive should take possession of the range selected. Cut down the number of sheep equal and give all an equal chance.

"Let so many go in at a certain time and let them then hustle for the best places."

Grant County.

Mr. Cooper, of Grant county, said that while he favored the reserve, a majority of his people were opposed to it.

Umatilla County.

Mr. Rugg, of Umatilla, said a majority was in favor of the reserve. Not in favor of a scramble. An apportionment would be favored. An allotment should be made for a number of years. Sheep ought to be kept out later so that range could be protected.

An allotment, even at a small rental, would be better than a scramble. A general discussion was entered into. Mr. Webb, of Walla Walla, was in favor of reserve and believed in allotment.

Mr. Young discussed the Cascade reserve at length and favored the prior rights question.

J. H. Dobbins, of Joseph, Walla Walla county, was opposed to the allotment system. He said that if woolgrowers living near the reserve should not get a suitable allotment they would then go somewhere and compete with woolgrowers outside and this would result in an injury to them.

The Scalp Bounty Law.

Mr. Williamson said: "Two years ago, in addressing a meeting similar to this, at this place, and upon this subject, I used the following language: 'The history of progressive civilization is largely a repetition of wars on barbarous tribes of men on the one hand, on the other, the elimination and stamping out of wild and destructive beasts.'"

"Continuing along this same line, I said: 'It occurs that the interests of civilization and the welfare of the wolf do not go hand in hand. The interests of one are inimical to the welfare of the other. In order that the wolf may replenish the earth, civilization must recede and visa versa.'"

"At that time, I believed that doctrine to be true. I have found nothing since to cause me to change my opinion, all the field mouse and rabbit theories to the contrary notwithstanding."

"At that time the state of Oregon was reaping the whirlwind in the matter of expense as a result of two scalp bounty laws—one just enacted—one passed two years previous."

"The first law, which was created at the legislative session of 1898-9, while it served the desired purpose so far as the destruction of predatory animals was concerned, failed to provide revenue to defray the expenses. It, therefore, fell to the lot of the session of 1900—not only to enact practically a new law on this subject and to provide the money to pay the expenses, but to provide means for paying the scalp certificates issued under the old law, amounting, in round numbers, to the sum of $120,000."

"And yet, I will say, for the encouragement of friends of this measure, this was accomplished by the last legislature in the face of exactly the same opposition that the law now has, when, at the coming session it will only require one-half or even a less amount of state aid in order to continue the present bounty."

"As stated, we were confronted two years ago with a double expense account. Those of us who are handling the measure in the legislature at that time were hard pressed to find a suitable place to bring in, or rather, to wring in $120,000 in such manner as not to arouse opposition sufficiently to break down the law."

"How well we succeeded, may be illustrated I believe, by this audience. Practically every one present are tax payers. Most every one present is what is termed a heavy tax payer, and I doubt materially if there are a half dozen in this audience who can stand up and tell me how that $120,000 was paid."

"I mention this incident not for the purpose of exploiting anything in the nature of smartness on the part of the Oregon legislature—God forbid, but for the purpose of demonstrating to you what an inconsiderate sum $120,000 is, when properly applied to a great state like Oregon, and to serve as proof to you, further, that this state is not going to be bankrupted if it should be required to contribute somewhere between twenty-five and fifty thousand dollars a year for a few years more for the purpose of finishing up this undertaking."

Objections to Law.

"Objections can be and are raised to any state law containing an expenditure of public money. Even the expenditure of the money that is necessary for the care of the unfortunate insane is criticized by some people. There are many who doubt the expediency of paying out so much money for the establishment and maintenance of state colleges. I, myself, might be considered among this class. And yet, while there are those of us who oppose the principal involved in the state undertaking to occupy the professional or classical education field, it cannot be denied that great good is being accomplished by these costly institutions of learning."

"In its state university, Oregon will soon have an institution ranking many similar institutions in much older and wealthier states, from which, education in all scientific and classical lines are disseminated free of charge. The same may be said of the branch institutions of the same nature in different localities throughout the state."

"Objection is raised by many to so much outlay in the care of our criminals. Many contending that our state penitentiary should and could sustain itself. But it cannot—at least does not, and we are compelled to tax ourselves from time to time for its support."

"The small amount appropriated for the perpetuation of the salmon fishing industry is objected to by many, on the ground that in its application it is local in its nature when it has been clearly demonstrated during the past two years that by the expenditure of a comparative bagatelle on the part of the state for salmon hatcheries, the fourth greatest industry of Oregon can be preserved indefinitely, if materially increased."

"Objections and criticisms of those whose duty it is to dispense the public funds have always been, and will ever remain, a fertile field wherein false prophets ply their trade and demagogues thrive and fatten."

"The scalp bounty law—a law put on the statute books of Oregon with some hesitation on account of the known cost, based upon the experience of other states has not escaped."

"The objections to the scalp bounty law may be enumerated as follows: "First—The cost of maintaining it. "Second—The difficulty experienced in keeping out scalps from other states not having a bounty.

"Third—That it is merely a sheep law."

"Fourth—Decrease the coyotes and supposed consequent increase in rabbits."

"These are the objections most frequently heard, and might be divided into two classes real and fancied. The first two objections belonging to the first class, the third and fourth objections might easily be placed as imaginary or fancied objections."

"I might mention one other, in the case of a gentleman whom I met over in Gilliam county during the campaign last spring. A friend of mine who wished to give me a proper send-off introduced me to him as the 'gentleman who had it strictly in for coyotes and all such.' The gentleman replied that I was the man he was looking for. 'I wanted to explain to you,' he said, 'that you and a few more like you have about ruined my business.' I tried to explain to him that I was a candidate for congress, and that, in all probability, the scalp bounty question would not come up in that body for consideration."

"He said that didn't make any difference to him, it was up for discussion in Oregon and that I need not expect to get his vote. He went on to explain that he had just branched out nicely three or four years ago in the stag hound business, when along came the bounty law and made such a scarcity of varmints for the hounds to chase that he could not dispose of his increase. Consequently the hounds had thickened upon his hands until they were eating him out of house and home. I have thought since, that there was about as much logic in this gentleman's objection to the law as a number of others I have heard of being urged against it."

"The first objection, as to the cost of the law is a real, tangible objection, or rather, obstacle in the way of the law."

"No one denies that it will cost a great deal of money to rid Oregon."
