THE DALLES.

Some Early History About the Coun try Lying East of the Place.

From the time of the earliest settlement of Oregon The Dalles has occupied a prominent place in the history of the state.

It first became a municipality by an act of the territorial legislature at the 1856-7 session.

Before this, however, it had grown into quite a town, and was growing and thriving on the trade gained through the ever-increasing travel and transfer of supplies to the far interior.

In 1851 the first steamboat, the Flint, was built to operate on the The Wasco was built in 1854, river. and next came the Mary, built by the Messrs. McFarland.

In 1852 C. W. Denton located a tract at the mouth of Mill Creek, on the east side, and established a boat landing. This was for years the land-ing place of the boats doing business on the middle river. From 1852 reg ular communication was established between The Dalles and Portland. Bradford & Co. afterwards built the steamer Hassalo, and a few years later the different transportation in terests were consolidated, and the Oregon Steam Navigation Company was organized. Thus early in "the
