SMALL STRIKE ON

WOOLEN MILL MEN WALKED OUT LAST SATURDAY.

A Fight Among Union Men—Local and Imported Men Disagree as to Who Shall Lay Off.

Pendleton has a little labor trouble on her hands in the form of a small strike.

A difference has arisen between two sets of employes in the Pendleton Woolen Mills that may result in a general change of employes at that institution. As a peculiar state of affairs, both sets of employes are union men and belong to the American Federation of Labor. Twelve of the men are members of a San Francisco union and 15 are members of a Pendleton union. They are all graders and sorters in the Pendleton Woolen Mills.

It appears that a little more than four months ago the mill owners sent to San Francisco and employed 12 union men to come to Pendleton, guaranteeing them four months' work. On this account when work got slack, and it was necessary to lay men off, the Pendleton men were laid off. This, the Pendleton men claim they submitted to until the four months' contract expired and then they demanded an equal show with the Californians.

The contending persons do not exactly agree on this point. The mill owners say that the Pendleton 15 demanded that all of their men should work or refused to permit any of them to work. This, it is claimed, is in accordance with the ruling of their local union.

Falling to come to an agreement about the matter, the Pendleton boys walked out last Saturday afternoon. The mill men then sent to The Dalles for men and four have already arrived and are at work.

The local men claim that they received inquiry from The Dalles for union men, who learning that there was a strike here, refused to come, and they claim that union men will not work at the mills while the trouble is on. They also say that they do not see how non-union men will be permitted to work along side of the San Francisco men, who are union men.

The Pendleton men have made a proposition, they say, that all men shall work at a time when there is work and all lay off at the same time; that instead of half of the men laying off two days at a time, let them all lay off one day.

The Pendleton men upon being informed that it had been reported that they intended to interfere with the new men should they come, said that they had made no such statement.

Mr. Judd says that on account of shortage of wool coming in at times, he does not need all of the men; that he had at one time offered to lay all of the men off at the same time and also let them all work at the same time, but that the Pendleton men refused to do this; that they demanded that all work or none would work.

Whether such complication has arisen that the mill people cannot now agree upon this is not known. They may have gotten other people on their hands who may demand the fulfillment of contracts made which would require keeping more men than the mill could afford.

The men who walked out are many of the old hands and valuable to the institution and are badly needed.

While the trouble cannot be termed a serious strike, yet it presents the appearance of one. It is thought that the management and men will come to some kind of satisfactory arrangements and that it will all blow over in a day or two.

People should not become alarmed over the scare of "Strike in Pendleton!" It is merely a little difference between a handful of men and the matter should be speedily adjusted.

Members of the Pendleton union claim that they visited the woolen mills this afternoon and found that two of the new men employed are union men and the other two are non-union men. The idea prevails that when union men work along side of non-union men when there are union men idle, that they forfeit rights in the union.

An East Oregonian representative made inquiry on this point and it is claimed that union men may work with non-union men without trespassing the laws of the union under certain conditions; that they may agree with the employe upon the union scale of wages to be paid to all alike and that under this agreement non-union men may work. "While this is the law," said a union man, "yet it is a very poor union and a very poor union man that will work under such circumstances."

JOHN VANCE IS DEAD.

Well Known Character Died at Pilot Rock Saturday Night.

John Vance, aged 56 years, died at the home of a friend at Pilot Rock Saturday night of a general breaking down.

Mr. Vance was perhaps one of the best known characters in this part of the country. He came here about 10 years ago and nothing is known of his relatives. He first herded sheep and within a few years had accumulated some means and went into the sheep business himself. About two years ago he sold his sheep and since has been gradually falling in health. He came to the Sisters' hospital, where he remained a while and a few weeks ago was taken from the hospital to Pilot Rock, where he died. He was buried Sunday in the Pilot Rock cemetery.

TO MEET AT WALLA WALLA.

Washington State Editorial Association Meets There Tomorrow for a Three-Days' Session.

Walla Walla, Sept. 22.—Tomorrow in this city, will convene the 16th annual convention of the Washington State Editorial Association, for a three-days' session. It is expected that about 100 papers will be represented, the total attendance ranging near 150. A local committee has charge of arrangements, and a program of entertainment, with a concert and banquet as features, has been arranged. The convention occurs during the fruit fair in this city, and the visitors will have an excellent chance to see the products of Eastern Washington on display. This is the first visit of the state association to this city or Southeastern Washington, in fact.

Billy Hughes Better.

Billy Hughes, the barber, who was taken into custody last week because he was acting in a strange manner, is said to be getting a little better, but is still in a serious condition. Hughes is badly demented. He had been on a protracted spree, and Friday evening started down the street only partly dressed, when he was taken into custody. Since having been incarcerated in jail he has repeatedly tried to kill himself by butting his head against the iron bars of his cell. Just what will be done with him has not yet been decided, but unless he gets over his temporary aberration he will probably be taken to the asylum.

North Carolina History.

The cover of the history bears the North Carolina and Confederate flags in colors, and the legend: "First at Bethel; farthest to the front at Gettysburg and Chancellorsville; last at Appomattox." There are in the volumes many full page pictures of the officers of the 84 regiments sent to the front by the state, and many maps of battlefields on which the troops were engaged. It is shown that while the voting population of the state was 115,000 it contributed 125,000 soldiers to the confederate army. More than 41,000 of these were killed or died in service.

Moved Across the Street.

Billy Krassig's shaving parlors have been moved across the street from his old location and he would be pleased to serve the public in his new location and invites all to call and see him when they desire clean, smooth work by first-class workmen.

In a Critical Condition.

Levi Hays, for many years' driver of the laundry wagon for the Domestic laundry, was operated upon at the Sisters' hospital today and is reported to be in a critical condition, by Dr. Smith, one of the surgeons.

A MAN AND A COUGAR.

Battle in Which Results are Not Given.

A few days ago as Jack Kelsey was coming through the mountains from Little Chewaucan he rode onto a huge mountain lion or cougar. As everybody knows Jack is a courageous, daredevil sort of a mountaineer, longing at all times for more wild beasts to conquer; and Mr. Cougar, too, looked vicious and on the peck.

However, Jack's horse was not so bloodthirsty as its rider and Jack found himself handicapped by cowardice on the part of the horse. Not willing to miss the sport of a combat with a cougar Jack quickly dismounted, tied his horse to a near-by tree and, with stiletto in hand, declared battle with Mr. Cougar. His attack was resented and Mr. Cougar came at Kelsey with bloodcurdling viciousness.

Jack's nerve never faltered him in the least, but his legs began their automatic work, and before he could gain control of them he found himself climbing a tree. On and on he went until a large branch was reached where Jack poised to take in the situation below. He was not long in taking it in for only a few feet below was Mr. Cougar scrambling up in pursuit of his combatant.

Kelsey straddled the limb and began to "coon" it backwards; the cougar followed in close pursuit. This was getting desperate and the end was near; what to do Jack knew not. Finally a novel idea struck him, and, poising on the tip of the limb, with the cougar staring him in the face only a few inches away, Jack threw out both hands and exclaimed in terror-stricken tones to Mr. Cougar: "Shoo! go back; go back, you fool, you; this limb will break in a minute and we will both fall and be killed." Jack won't tell the rest.—Paiseley (Lake County) News.
