GOOD COMPANY AT FRAZER'S

GAVE A GREAT PLAY
LAST NIGHT.

Will Close Tonight in "Wicked London"—Pathos, Fun and Specialties.

A small but appreciative audience greeted the Elizabeth Hale Company at Frazer's last night in the play "Treachorous Sands." Those who did not attend have reason to regret it. It was a comedy drama full of snap from start to finish. The audience was a perfect uproar at every breath. It was an unexpected treat. The play the night before by the same company did not take so well and those who attended probably expected a chill. The entire company was on its metal and every member proved himself or herself an actor. Miss Hale, as "Bettrice," showed her ability for heavy work and Mr. Platt as "Billie," was at his zenith in comedy. Mr. Stephens made a great hit in his song "Boy in Blue." In fact it is not doing justice in failing to mention the entire company individually. Mr. H. Armour, manager of the company is the author of the play and has just succeeded in placing it in the East.

"Wicked London" Tonight.

The company will close its engagement at Frazer's this evening in the comedy-drama, "Wicked London," one of Frank Harvey's best plays. The play starts in the home of David Burton, a rich merchant in Liverpool, who discovers that his daughter is in love with one of his clerks, and in consequence drives her from his house, because she refuses to give up the man she loves. The young couple become very poor under the hand of adversity and after many vicissitudes the husband is wrongfully arrested for attempted murder and sent to prison. He afterwards escapes with another convict who discloses the real culprit and all ends happily. In the meantime the play is full of comedy, and specialties are introduced so that the audience is kept interested all through—seeing the saddest of the sad and funniest of fun from beginning to end. The characters are especially adapted to the players and every one will sustain the reputation of the company tonight.

The Other Side.

To the Editor: The article of G. W. Dunbar under the caption "Sunday Closing Law," may not deserve the serious attention of the worthy divine, referred to, but I feel that some of the insinuations contained therein should not be permitted to pass unnoticed. Of all the fanatics of today, there are none more mischievous than those who are aping liberalism, and in its guise, apologizing for loose morals and defiance of laws, and willing to sacrifice all for sordid purposes.

A man that attempts to belittle the Puritans and Puritan ideas shows a lack of appreciation of the sublimest principles and most heroic efforts for the betterment of mankind. The late great historian and philosopher, John Fiske says: "Had it not been for the Puritans, political liberty would probably have disappeared from the world." To associate the Puritans with opposition to human liberty is a blunder.

Here is a man professing himself a respectable, law-abiding citizen, rejoicing in what he deems the imbecility of enthusiasts to enforce the laws of the land.

Why can they not be enforced? Because there are too many like himself who want to interpret the law to their own advantage; men destitute of moral convictions and governed by policy more than principle. The logic of this article is suicidal. It means practically that everyone should be a law unto himself. Does he not know that he reflects upon the lawmakers by insinuating that the laws are not supposed to be enforced? Suppose every man was to say, "I will only obey those laws that are to my advantage," the thieves, forgers and all such law-breakers would be a violation of every principle that perpetuates our present civilization?

Daniel Webster in his answer to Harne, said: "For a state to resist the enforcement of a national law was revolution if it succeeded, rebellion if it failed." Is it not just as true for a citizen to resist enforcement of municipal law? Is it not revolution if he succeeds, or rebellion if he fails?

In the book entitled "The American Citizen," studied in our high schools, we find these words: "Sometimes a law may seem to the individual citizen unnecessary or trivial, or may prove inconvenient. Nevertheless, no one has any right to put his personal preference or convenience before the laws which serve the public good."

His reference to the blue laws of Connecticut, which are more legendary than real, and the time when men were burned in the name of religion, is beneath notice. It is difficult to account for such references, but the purpose seem to be to create prejudice against those who try to hold up the banner of the Cross and strive for moral purity and the amelioration of mankind. "The laws are all right, but our state solons never intended that a crank should be allowed to grind out justice." What wholesale sentiment, if the sentence means anything, it evidently means the laws are all right, but they were never intended to be taken seriously.

He insinuates that fanatics can make trouble, but never brought about reformation. It is a fact that those dubbed fanatics have and do cause trouble to evil-doers; it is a fact also, that they have been the most prominent in bringing about moral and political reformations. This world is more indebted to them than to any other class of people. They have never lacked in moral courage, or spared themselves in order to benefit mankind, by trying to bring about an improved social order.

$100 Reward, $100

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one cure in all its stages and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for each case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

LOOKING FOR CREAMERY SITE.

Idaho Man Preparing to Put in Large Plant Here to Manufacture Butter and Ice for Wholesale Trade.

L. P. Biddick, of Meridian, Idaho, is in Pendleton looking for a location to start a creamery. He has a strong backing and has been engaged in the business for 16 years. He has a large plant at his Idaho home, but thinks there is a good opening here for a large plant.

He is interviewing prominent citizens today on the subject and has a number of propositions under consideration. It is the purpose to put in a creamery with a large capacity and confine the business entirely to the wholesale trade. Butter will be a specialty, but ice cream will be manufactured on a large scale.

Speaking of Pendleton, Mr. Biddick said that he likes the appearance of the place, sees business everywhere he goes and is not afraid to cast his lot in such a place, if he can make suitable arrangements for his business.
