THE MODERN DRUGGISTS . . . PENDLETON

MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 29, 1902.

Woman-killing is getting to be a fad in New York and other Eastern cities. These are all the outcome of years of dissipation, such as the society of that country cultivates.

The move on foot to advertise this country is a good one. The coast country has never and will never be neglected, and the resources of the Inland Empire are not such as should be kept hidden under a bushel. In fact, the most valuable resources of Oregon today lie here.

Repeated hold-ups are not considered prime advertising for any community. The real ones are bad enough, but when it comes to faking them, it is disgusting. It may be "fashionable" to get held up nowadays, but one should not bring his community into disrepute just to humor a fad.

And now Bryan indicates that he may accept another nomination at the hands of democrats for the presidency. Democracy has enough of Bryan. He should take the proverbial "back seat." But then as long as there is a chance to play to the galleries Bryan will never "down."

The accident to Mayor Humes, which came nearly costing him his life, is another illustration of the uselessness of officers leading such a strenuous life. While the mayor's death would not have caused as much general lament as would that of the president, yet the wall of the Seattle gamblers would have been long and loud.

The Ohio campaign is on foot. Root, Foraker and Hanna are in the field. Foraker says that the republican party will not hamstring the country's business to please anybody. Tariff revision and Cuban relief are favored. All of this by the republicans! But it is election year. The republicans always talk to please when there is an election on. Will not hamstring the country's business! Whoever heard of the republicans failing to hamstring, bind, gag, smother or crush when it would benefit their interests or that of their leaders? Then whoever heard of the republicans favoring tariff revision, except just before election? And whoever heard of them favoring the relief of Cuba or the relief of anything else unless they gained by it? It is the same old story, and while the orators vamp and make promises the big monopolistic hand that clasps them only slackens the grip while the campaign is on.

Some of the interior papers are dissatisfied with the resolutions passed by the woolgrowers at their recent session in Pendleton regarding the forest reserve. It has long been known that everybody could not be pleased. When the stock interests and the papers representing them cannot agree it should not be expected that those having antagonistic interests to them should aid them in settling these questions. It is the same with the coyote bounty question. If Eastern Oregon is to be divided among itself it need not expect the support of those antagonistic to the law. A united front is a hard one to break and petty local jealousies will never strengthen any cause. The people of Eastern Oregon should get together on all of these questions and determine what is right, or is nearest right, and pull together. Continual bickering is rapidly weakening every side of the question in this country.

ENEMIES WITHIN AND WITHOUT.

The commissioner of immigration has made a report to the president, in which he urges more rigid restrictions upon immigration. He points especially to that class of foreigners which makes up the bulk of the coal mining population in the Eastern States, and recommends laws that will shut out all that foreign element which in any manner comes under contract to our shores. It is beyond question that the coal and steamship companies have agents in Eastern Europe for the purpose of supplying cheap labor for the coal fields.

The evil and dangerous disposition of this sort of people is now being exhibited in the East. They disregard all laws and discipline. They are ignorant to the very uttermost degree of American institutions and the civilized objects of society. The only solitary excuse offered for their presence here, is that they work cheap, and it was thought by those who brought them, that they could be driven like cattle. Two facts upon which the coal barons seek to found a monarchy of wealth, which might stand unquestioned in the face of all laws and constitutions to the contrary.

The foreigner is not to blame for seeking to better his condition. He has been taught in his peculiar school of society and government that the people and the government are antagonistic. That a constant warfare against the state is necessary and righteous. Armed with these false notions, he is like a firebrand—ready to flash into flame at the slightest disturbing breath.

Those who bring him to our midst, in his untutored, misguided state of mind, are responsible to American citizens for his crimes and his mistakes. They are the law-breakers. They are willing to set aside the fruits of all good efforts to make this country better. They are willing to undermine its constitutions and overthrow its purpose for the sake of a cheap laborer, who can never become a true citizen of the country. They are our enemies through conspiracy. The foreigner is an enemy only through ignorance of our customs.

THE AGE OF SUGAR.

Statistics compiled by the treasury bureau of statistics show a remarkable increase in the per capita consumption of sugar throughout the world, and notably in the United States and Great Britain. The complete figures of the rate of increase of consumption are to be published in the forthcoming Statistical Abstract of the bureau, which presents the net results of the investigations into the subject.

From the summary it appears that the people of the United States now consume eight times as much sugar per capita as they did in the first quarter of the last century, four times as much as the average per capita during the decade ending with 1850 and twice as much as they did in any year prior to 1870. In the years immediately prior to 1825 the average consumption of sugar was about eight pounds per capita, in the decade 1840-50 about sixteen pounds per capita, in the years immediately prior to 1870 the average was about 32 pound per capita (omitting the war years, in which the consumption was light), from 1870 to 1880 it averaged about 40 pounds per capita, from 1880 to 1890, 50 pounds per capita; in 1891 the figure was 56 pounds per capita and has ranged from 62 to 68 pounds per capita since that time, the figure of 1901 being 68.4 pounds.

The demand for sugar and the increase in its consumption has been going on in Europe as well as in this country. The statistics of the entire world was in 1900 eight times greater than in 1840, the production of 1840 being 1,150,000 tons, while that of 1900 was 8,800,000 tons.

The report says: "This increase in production and consequently in consumption has come largely through the development of the beet sugar industry, which increased from a production of 50,000 tons in 1840 to 290,000 tons in 1880, 3,633,000 tons in 1890 and 5,950,000 tons in 1900. Beets in 1840 supplied 4.35 per cent of the total sugar product of the world, in 1850 they supplied 14.29 per cent, in 1860 20.43 per cent, in 1870 34.40 per cent, in 1890 63.70 per cent and in 1900 67.71 per cent."

The rapid development of sugar production in this country is one of the principal benefits the protective policy has conferred upon agricultural industries. At the rate at which the production of domestic sugar is progressing we shall soon produce in the United States not only enough to supply the increasing home demand, but to have some for export as well.—San Francisco Call.

MAUDLIN SYMPATHY.

At the close of a trial in which a horse thief had been found guilty, lawyers for the defense made a touching appeal to the court for leniency in the sentence. An aged mother, wife and child were referred to, as inducements for the judge to be moderate in passing sentence, notwithstanding the fact that four jurors of his peers had found the man guilty of common, wilful, unrefined horse stealing.

It has come to be a common custom for a certain class of unthinking school girls and sympathetic grass-widows to shed tears over condemned murderers, and to shower bouquets upon them in their cells at prison. It is so disgusting that lovers of justice and right-minded people should look upon these maudlin tears with contempt.

In the case of the horse thief the respect for the aged mother and loving family, did not deter him from committing the crime. He went bold into wrong without giving his needy ones a thought. Should the trial judge be more considerate of them than the man nearest to them? Will wrong doing decrease if such elements enter into the penalties?

Justice is sometimes harsh, it seems, but it must prevail. Those who are left without a protector by the inexorable process of law and its punishments, deserve the sympathy and assistance of the community. But the guilty is no less guilty by their misfortune and the penalty for his crime is the same as if he had no friend on earth.

Men should look beyond the crime, and take a second thought upon the consequences, before taking the step. After they are caught and condemned it shows very much of the coward under their robe to parade the sympathy racket before the judge and the public.

A HANDFUL OF PARAGRAPHS.

Rain-making will have to be revived as a result of the "dry" campaign conducted by Mrs. Nation's followers in Kansas.

The proud father of a boy has much to look forward to in this age. There is a crying need in every country town for a good baseball manager.

What a pity that Lewis and Clarke did not locate the site for their own fair, instead of leaving this task for posterity. It would have been much easier for those two men to have reached a conclusion than it is for a twentieth century city with so many other attractions with which to deal.

The Tracy fad has received a sudden blow. A common farmer shot down an escaped convict in Washington before he had time to order his first meal.

Bright's Disease and Diabetes Positively Curable.

They are curing Bright's Disease and Diabetes in California. The percentage of efficiency (recoveries) in these hitherto incurable diseases averages as high as 87 per cent. The details of the investigation and demonstration of the new compounds are so conclusive that we at once sent for a bundle of the reports and for the new treatment for urgent cases in this city. Call or send for one of the reports.
