IMPORTANT CASE

RIGHT OF ALLOTMENT ON RESERVATION SETTLED.

Mrs. Smith, a Walla Walla Indian Had Made Her Selection, But Because She Was Not on Allotment List Was Barred—She Won Out in the Court.

The case of Philomene Smith vs. He-yu-tse-milkin, one of the most important and far-reaching, in its results, brought in the state of Oregon, was decided in plaintiff's favor by the U. S. court of appeals sitting in San Francisco, Monday of this week. The case involves the right to an allotment on the Umatilla Indian Reservation and was brought in the U. S. circuit court for the district of Oregon about two years ago by Attorneys R. J. Slater and J. T. Hinkle of this city. He-yu-tse-milkin was represented by Hon. John H. Hall, U. S. district attorney. Charles H. Carter was appointed special master in chancery to take the testimony in the case. Upon Mr. Carter's findings of fact Judge Bellinger handed down a decision in plaintiff's favor which decision is now affirmed by the U. S. court of appeals.

The history of the case is briefly as follows: "Under the act of congress of March 3, 1885, Philomene Smith, who is a full-blood Indian woman of the Walla Walla tribe, was summoned by the chiefs of the Walla Walla, Cayuses and Umatillas to come upon the reservation and make her selection of land for herself and children. This she did, selecting some of the very best land situated near Adams. She built a house, enclosed the land with fence and established her residence. On April 1, 1891, President Harrison appointed J. P. Busche and J. B. Eddy special allotting agent to go upon the reservation and make allotments according to the provisions of the law. They refused to allot Mrs. Smith on the land she had selected on the ground that her name did not appear on the allotting list and that she was not a Umatilla Indian. The tract she had selected for herself was allotted to He-yu-tse-milkin, and she was ousted and peremptorily allotted inferior land. She sought redress in the department of the interior where it was finally decided that she was entitled to an allotment, but not to the tract she had selected. After years of waiting she was finally informed by the department as late as 1897 that she had no remedy, and was forced to give up her land.

In 1894 congress passed a law giving U. S. circuit courts jurisdiction to try cases involving the right of allotments. Under this enactment, Mrs. Smith sought redress in the federal courts. The allotment she claimed was under the act commonly called the Slater Bill, ex-Senator J. H. Slater, of this state having been its author.

Pendleton attorneys concede the winning of the Smith case to be one of the greatest legal victories ever achieved in the state. It raises entirely new questions of law regarding the status of Indians under the allotment acts. In anticipation of a favorable decision in the Smith case, Messrs. Slater and Hinkle filed five other similar cases some months ago, which are now pending in the United States circuit court abiding the result of this decision.

TO START CHICKEN RANCH.

Baker City Man Will Launch into a Profitable Business.

The demand for eggs is so great in Baker City that several car loads of Eastern eggs have to be shipped into that city every year. With such an unlimited demand for eggs, it seems very reasonable to believe that a chicken ranch would pay well if the farmer was located near the city. A gentleman who has looked into the poultry business considerably, insists that there is no better field in the United States for a first-class chicken ranch.

Dr. May, of that city, who has leased the hot springs near Haines, says he will establish an immense chicken incubator and employ the hot water of the springs to hatch the eggs. The improvements to be made at the proposed new resort have not been inaugurated, but just as soon as the material can be gotten together work will begin on the new natatorium and the chicken house.

Money for Fire Sufferers.

Walla Walla, Oct. 9.—The city of Walla Walla yesterday sent $500 in cash to the fire sufferers in Southwestern Washington, the amount having been appropriated for the purpose by the city council. Aside from the money, a ton of flour and other articles have been forwarded from citizens.
