A COLORADO EDITOR

MR. HERRICK, OF THE DENVER POST, VISITS PENDLETON.

Sees Many Good Things Here—A Little Jealous—Finds a Modest Man—The Evening Paper.

Herbert Alonso Herrick, Sunday Editor of the Denver Post, and late war correspondent of the New York Herald, spent the day in Pendleton yesterday, the guest of the East Oregonian. Mr. Herrick knows a good thing when he sees it and saw many good things in Pendleton and Umatilla county. He was busy a large portion of the day gathering photographs and data for an extended illustrated write-up of this section.

The Inland Empire.
 He claims that this section has not only scenery almost equalling that of Colorado, but that its resources are equally as interesting. Even our Indians interested him and he secured some fine views of some of the most noted men of the reservation.

He said it was difficult to realize how rapidly this country had grown since his last visit, and that too, so far from Colorado and the Middle West. When the people of the Middle West start this way, they expect to run into a frontier country, a country such as Colorado was 50 years ago, but they are surprised to find the same progress here as in the Middle West, and in some places, admitted Mr. Herrick, a little more progress than they find at many points in the Middle West. What is known as the Inland Empire section is really the most attractive point in the West at this time. This, he claims, is brought about by the recent passage of the Irrigation law.

Irrigation at the Bottom.
 Colorado has long been the central point in the fight for the passage of these laws and has given more attention to the subject of irrigation than any state in the Union, and as a consequence most of the arid lands there are taken. It is generally understood throughout the country that they are still open in the country, and for that reason the world is looking this way. He wonders why so many are still vacant with the great value attached to them. Such locations as are here would be scrambled after back in Colorado.

Our Resources.
 When told of our wheat, our stock, our wool, our hundreds of resources, the gentleman appeared jealous for a moment. It is the custom of Colorado people to feel themselves superior in all of these points, but when they examine into the existing conditions they find that they have a rival here, with the advantage of both water and rail transportation that may some day outstrip them in many ways.

A Modest Man.
 He thinks Major Moorehouse, of Pendleton, is the most modest person he ever met. He had been informed that the major was an amateur photographer. In looking over the major's collection of photographs, and he has occasion to examine thousands of photographs every month for his publication, he said: "Some one told me you were only an amateur." "That's all," replied the major. "If you are an amateur, there are a whole lot of amateurs in the country posing as experts." Then he looked at another of the famous amateur's productions and continued: "Where did you get on to that side-light?" "Just picked it up," replied Mr. Moorehouse. "There is but one other man in the United States that has picked that up, and he claims to be the originator and the only one that can do that class of work," replied the newspaper man. He went away believing that the major is the most modest man he ever met, or that the major and his friends were deceiving him.

The Evening Paper.
 "I see you are running an evening paper, and a good one, too," remarked Mr. Herrick. "The evening paper is the paper of the day. But for the fact that the Associated Press is owned by the morning papers and is compelled to work against the evening papers, the morning paper would soon become strictly secondary throughout the country. The evening paper has all of the advantage. In spite of the fact that the Associated Press is practically fighting the evening paper it is coming to the front right along and the statistics show that it is gaining the lead both in circulation and as a business institution."

"The news of the world is practically in for the evening paper when it goes to press and the morning paper is more of a rehash or padding out of what has already been published in the evening paper. Men of all classes usually get up and go about their work while their minds are fresh. They merely glance over the headlines of the morning paper if it is convenient to see if anything special has happened since the evening paper was issued. But at night, when the day's work is done, they sit down, take up the evening paper and read at their leisure all of the news of the day. It is a recreation to them. It is what gives the evening paper the circulation. This gives it business, and this is what is bringing the evening paper to the front in spite of all opposition, and will make it the paper of this century."

Mr. Herrick went from here to Spokane, at which place he will spend several days, after which he will spend the remainder of his vacation viewing the sights of the Pacific Northwest.

Few who enjoyed Saturday night's presentation of "The Tempest" knew that several of those enacting prominent roles in the performance had troubles of their own, through not being acquainted with the inner workings of the O. R. & N. passenger train schedule, says the Baker City Herald. As it was, the actors mentioned came within ace of "hiking upon the tie" from La Grande to this city and thus demonstrate the traditional ability of a tragedian as a track walker.

From La Grande advices it is gleaned that the troupe arrived at the best sugar town in possession of ravenous appetites. The train was a little slow and as some time was consumed at that station the subjects of Prospero thought the opportunity ripe to satisfy the cravings of the inner man. Accordingly the whistle sounded, wings were shifted and the starving ones stepped forth and headed for a caravansary.

After hurriedly devouring everything in sight and being prevented from raiding the culinary department only by the knowledge that time was more essential than pies, they migrated to the depot. No train was seen and upon reaching the platform, instinct compelled their gaze to be turned east where they discovered the last Pullman vanishing in the distance. Passage was secured upon a freight train which pulled out soon after, though some difficulty was experienced in convincing the crew that they were not "hamfat" stars and intent upon beating the company. They reached here safe and had time to line up again before "going on."

One Solid Week.

Miss Clara Mathes and company will open a week's engagement at Frazer's opera house, Monday October 20, producing the latest eastern dramatic successes and refined vaudeville. The plays used by this company are new to the west. Special scenery, costumes, properties and electrical effects are carried for each production. A special and pleasing feature of the Clara Mathes performance is the introduction of specialties between acts making the performance continuous and going away with long waits and tiresome overtures.

Miss Mathes and company will use for their opening performance the great eastern success, "In the Philippines," a comedy drama. Miss Mathes will be seen in the character of a Red Cross nurse. Specialties will be introduced by Miss Emma Mathes, Mr. Oswald Roberts, Rowe & Cleveland, the Lawrence and Bert Van Cleve.

Prices for this engagement 10, 20 and 30 cents

Hot wienewurst and saur kraut at Gratz's.

THIS IS OLD DR. KESSLER

One of the World's Greatest Specialists, Who Has Kept Hundreds From an Early Grave or the Insane Asylum.

Now, look here, young man, don't be so careless. Don't put off any longer; have your case attended to today, for your looks tell on you. You may conclude to get married some day, and to live happy you must be a man rugged and strong physically and mentally. So many divorce cases we hear of, if an investigation was made, would disclose the fact that physical and nervous weakness of the husband causes the wife to finally hate him. Women love a manly man, just as much as men love beautifully developed, healthy, red-cheeked women. Blisters and pimples show something wrong. All kinds of diseases are cured by this old doctor. It is not necessary to go to see him; in a few diseases where surgery is required or cancers, old ulcers and such, it is better to see him, but all weakness and private conditions can be cured at home. He has a perfect system for home treatment; he always answers your letters in a plain envelope and keeps every case a profound secret. Pay no attention to the little books you find on streets, but trust yourself to an old doctor who has been curing cases like yours for over a quarter of a century in this city. Always inclose 10 2-cent stamps when writing for consultation, and send small bottle of your urine if possible. Address,

J. HENRI KESSLER, M. D.

Manager of the St. Louis Medical and Surgical Dispensary

Slusher Playing Football.
 The Chicago papers of recent date, containing the write-up of a recent football game in that city between Lake Forest College and Notre Dame College teams, give Dale Slusher, who is playing full-back, great credit for his work on the team. The paper states that Slusher and a player named Black on right end, played a star game and won the applause of the large crowd in attendance. Slusher writes to friends here that the Lake Forest football team is stronger this season than ever before and is going to win its share of the football games from all comers.
