

The best at one-half price

It takes five of the ordinary "quarts" to make a gallon, but a HAYNER QUART is a full quart, an honest quart of 32 ounces, four to the gallon. Now, you pay your dealer at least $1.50 a bottle for whiskey that cannot possibly be any better than HAYNER. If as good, or $7.50 a gallon. If you buy HAYNER WHISKEY you save at least $3.50 on every gallon. We sell two gallons for about the same as you pay for one gallon of probably poorer whiskey. Just think that over and remember that HAYNER WHISKEY goes direct from our distillery to you, carries a UNITED STATES REGISTERED DISTILLER'S GUARANTEE of PURITY and AGE and saves you the dealers' enormous profits. That's why it's so good and so cheap. That's why we have over a quarter of a million satisfied customers. That's why YOU should try it. Your money back if you're not satisfied.

PHOTO ENLARGERS

A GLIMPSE AT THE INSIDE OF THEIR WORK.

How They Travel, Work and Succeed—Rehearsals, Taking Orders and Delivering.

Pendleton has recently been visited by representatives of a portrait company, whose business is to enlarge pictures. A great deal has been said about the "picture enlargers," and their methods, but few realize the magnitude of this industry, if it may be called an industry, and the large amount of money it takes out of the country, and the manner in which it is operated.

Character of the Men.

It is but little short of buncoing and many of its employees are confidence men of the first order. Still it has men in its employ that are persuaded that the business is legitimate and who try to deal legitimately with the public. These are few, however, and they do not last long with the company, as it is claimed that the conscientious man does not make a good canvasser and his place is soon taken by a man of little moral standing, who has a smooth tongue and plenty of "gall."

Organized Work.

The work over the country is conducted by several men who act in conjunction with each other. There is usually a state agent, and then under him are superintendents, foremen and common canvassers. Four or five go together. When they reach a good town they make their headquarters at a cheap hotel or at a lodging house and the head man, or "boss," remains at headquarters and his men all start out in the morning in different directions under an assignment, and not a person in a place is permitted to escape. At noon they report, take dinner together and exchange experiences, the "boss" being an eager listener and frequent "suggester." He is supposed to be skilled and can solve any problem that may come up. No one is supposed to escape giving an order if the "boss" should go after one he always gets it.

The "Boss" Works.

The "boss" sometimes at his leisure during the day takes big orders—works lodges and other institutions where he may take orders amounting to hundreds of dollars instead of the petty orders taken by his men. There is no such thing as failure from his point of view and the canvasser who fails, labors under great embarrassment in explaining how it occurred. This idea is so instilled in the canvassers that they become so persistent and resort to so many schemes to get orders that only those who have come in contact with them know to what desperate straits they will go.

At night the canvassers and the "boss" all get together in a room and rehearse the work as studiously as the most difficult play in Shakespeare is rehearsed, and a mistake in speech, attitude or action is criticised as rigidly as it would be by the master manager of a theatrical company.

Rehearsing.

One of the employees takes his canvassing outfit and retires from the room and another employe represents the landlady, man, or person who is supposed to be called upon. All of the different household is represented in the course of a "full dress" rehearsal, and at these rehearsals the young canvasser fits himself for the work. During rehearsal the "audience" is quiet as death, and after it is over the employes who witness the rehearsal are first required to comment and after all are through the "boss" explains who was right and who was wrong.

The Characters.

Every phase of humanity is illustrated in these rehearsals. The woman who has just lost a dear friend, the angry woman who is always busy, the society woman, the old maid, the poor woman with many children, the man of the house, the house girl, the young woman of the house. These persons are all represented in these rehearsals and the canvasser is taught how to meet them and get an order. Failure is out of the question in rehearsals.

How it is Done.

A few photos are placed on the bureau and on the tables and wall of the room and the canvasser steps outside. The one to represent the inside character prepares for the ordeal, "boss" and all of the employes seat themselves as an audience so as not to be in the way of the rehearsal. The canvasser knocks at the door and begins the "attack." If stubbornness is shown he forces himself into the room, practically walking over the person at the door. He begins to "spiel" and will not be turned away. He soon learns all about the family and the favorites of the family and secures a photo of the favorite and ascertains if it is the only one and the best one. If he can secure the photo of the deceased member of the family and it is the only one in existence this is considered "dead easy." If he cannot get a contract on easy terms, he gets one anyway. He will get the name of the person at the head of the family write it with address on the back of some favorite photo which he has secured to examine, and if the person has told him in emphatic terms that he or she does not wish any work done, he will talk very pleasantly for a few mo-

FREE MEDICAL ADVICE TO WOMEN

All Correspondence Is Sincerely Confidential

This is a very important consideration in a woman's correspondence with Mrs. Pinkham. It is a great satisfaction to feel that one woman can write to another telling her the most private and confidential details about her illness, and know that her letter will be seen by a woman only,—a woman full of sympathy for her sick sisters, and with a knowledge of woman's ills greater than that possessed by any other person.

Mrs. Pinkham never violates the confidence thus entrusted to her, and although she publishes thousands of testimonials from women who have been benefited by her advice and medicine, in all her experience has she published such a letter without the full consent, and often the special request of the writer.

The reason Mrs. Pinkham is so amply qualified to give advice in cases of female ills is for the reason that over one hundred thousand cases come before her each year,—some personally, others by mail, and this has been going on for twenty years, day after day, and day after day. Twenty years of constant study—think of the knowledge thus gained. Surely, women are wise in seeking advice from a woman of experience, especially when it is absolutely free.

As an illustration of the good coming from such advice we herewith publish two letters—portraits of Miss Hattie DeGroat, the reading of which should give every sick woman confidence in Mrs. Pinkham's ability to help them. This is only one of thousands of the same kind of letters which Mrs. Pinkham has on file.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I have read with interest your advice to others so that I thought I would write to you, for I have been suffering for a long time. I have bearing-down pains, and such shooting pains go through me. I have headache, backache and feel tired. Menstruation is very painful, sometimes have to stop work and lie in bed. My stomach bloats terribly, and I am troubled with whites. Hoping to hear from you soon, I remain,
July 24th, 1906.
MISS HATTIE DEGROAT, Succasunna, N. J."

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I can hardly find words to thank you for your advice. Wonderful Vegetable Compound. I was in a terrible state, every part of my body was very nervous, had hysterical spells. I think I would have become insane had it not been for Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Your letter told me just what to do and your medicine cured me, and I cannot express my thanks."
March 8th, 1901.
MISS HATTIE DEGROAT, Succasunna, N. J."

No other medicine in the world has received such widespread and unqualified endorsement. No other medicine has such a record of cures of female trouble, or such hosts of grateful friends. Do not be persuaded that any other medicine is just as good. Any dealer who suggests something else has no interest in your case. He is seeking a larger profit. Follow the record of this medicine and remember that the thousands of cures of women whose letters are constantly printed in this paper were not brought about by "something else," but by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

ments, bow politely, thank them for their kindness and walk out.

Delivering Pictures.

In a few weeks the man who delivers the pictures, and who is drilled as skillfully as is the canvasser, calls with the enlarged picture and has it in a frame. The original photo he states is in New York or Chicago and will be forwarded provided the picture and frame presented are taken and paid for in advance.

The man who delivers the enlarged picture will not hear to any statement that the picture was not ordered, but insists that his company does not employ that kind of men, and threatens, bulldozes, wherever he thinks it will go, until he gets the money. They run up against the "real thing" occasionally, but this is seldom, as most people are of a peaceable turn of mind and their victims are often women of the most timid inclination.

Thus these institutions take thousands of dollars out of the country annually, and but few people know how much drilling, buncoing, bulldozing and wrong is done in making it a go. It is one of the most scientific semi-blackmailing-buncoing institutions in the country today.

MRS. HELENA BLAU

Young Milwaukee Society Woman.

TEN thousand cured women have written to tell how Wine of Cardui bestows the blessing of health on every woman who takes it, rich and poor alike. Mrs. Helena Blau, No. 123 Seventh Street, Milwaukee, Wis., is one of the young women whom Wine of Cardui has rescued from a life of suffering. She writes:

"Wine of Cardui is certainly 'worn out' women's best friend and I am pleased to give my experience with it. A few months ago I caught a severe cold, having been out in inclement weather, which settled all over me, particularly in the abdomen. I was in almost constant pain. I consulted a physician and took his medicine for a month and without any relief. I then decided I would try your medicine and it was a lucky day for me when I did so. I noticed a change in a few days and felt encouraged to continue taking Wine of Cardui, and my patience was rewarded, for in two weeks my pains had left me and I felt like a new woman."
