E. N. LEROY IS FREE

JURY DECIDES HE DID NOT SHOOT AT PENLAND.

Evidence Not Strong Enough and Accused's Past Standing Had Much Weight With the Twelve Men in Whose Hands His Fate Hung.

E. N. LeRoy was exonerated from the charge of shooting at Clarence Penland by a jury in the district court last night. The case occupied the attention of the court from early in the morning to late in the afternoon, when it went to the jury. After being out less than two hours, the jury announced that it was ready to return its verdict, which was for acquittal.

The history of this case is quite well known. Last summer Clarence Penland was at the home of Mr. Mathies, in the lower end of town, and he and a young lady were sitting in the yard. It was warm weather and they were enjoying the night breezes. Someone came along and walked into the yard and was slipping toward the chicken house. Young Penland stepped in front of the fellow and asked him where he was going. The reply was: "Look out, young man; you will get hurt." The fellow backed out at the gate and young Penland followed into the street. After getting some distance away the fleeing figure turned and fired back at him with the result that the ball barely missed him and came close to the young lady.

Penland was well acquainted with LeRoy and he was positive that he recognized his voice. The matter was allowed to stand, however, for several days before any arrest was made and in the meantime the officers were trying to locate the right man. Penland and Policeman Fee got LeRoy in Penland's room and secured from him what they termed so near a confession that he was arrested and bound over by the justice on the evidence. When it came into court, however, and the jury heard the evidence, it decided that there was a mistake and it could not convict on the evidence produced.

Many witnesses were introduced to show that LeRoy's character had always been of the best and that he had never been under suspicion of crime before. His good standing in the town where he has lived for the past several years and the fact that the evidence was only one man's word against another and it being after dark when the thing occurred, made the jury give LeRoy the best of the doubt.

ARTESIAN WELLS.

Oregon, According to Investigation is Safe For Artesian Water.

Professor Israel C. Russell of the United States geological survey has issued a preliminary report, bearing date of September 20, on the artesian basins of Southern Idaho and Oregon, which must prove of great interest to people residing in these fortunate districts. An extract from the report kindly furnished by State Engineer Ross follows:

Four very promising artesian basins were discovered, one of them, however, being the westward extension of the Snake river basin, which was examined in part last summer. The artesian basins referred to are as follows:

First—The Snake river artesian basin, which begins on the east near Glen's Ferry, extends westward beyond the Oregon-Idaho boundary and reaches well into Oregon. The northern portion of this basin Professor Russell did not examine, but it probably embraces the region southwest of Huntington in Willow Creek valley. Several wells were put down in this basin last summer and fall with the hope of obtaining petroleum, and all but one resulted in a surface flow of water. The basin below the artesian head is something like 130 miles long and embraces all the land in the Snake river valley between Glenn's Ferry and Huntington and in the lower portion of the Owyhee and Malheur hour river valleys, which is below the 2500-foot contour. The artesian head is perhaps higher than here mentioned, but of this Professor Russell is not prepared to make a definite statement at present. Judging from the data in hand, flowing water should be obtained at Nampa, Caldwell, etc., in the Boise valley. The total area over which it is reasonable to expect that flowing water can be had is not less than 700 square miles.

Second—The Otis valley artesian basin embraces the valley of that name in Oregon, where the conditions are such as to justify the hope that flowing water can be had over an area of some 50 or 60 square miles.

Third—The Harney basin embraces the country about Harney and Malheur lakes, and is by far the largest and most important basin discovered. Its outer rim measures something like 100 miles from northwest to southeast and 50 to 60 miles from northeast to southwest. The area below the artesian head embraces practically all the flat lands below the level of Burns and Harney and includes not less than 1600 square miles, a part of which, however, is occupied by Harney and Malheur lakes and the adjacent swamps.

Fourth—The White Horse artesian basin is situated in Eastern Oregon; to the east of Stein's mountain and, as shown by the structure and by warm springs, will certainly yield flowing wells. The area below the artesian head is by estimate 100 square miles.

Each of the basins referred to is well worthy of development, as in each case there are large bodies of fine land. The total area, roughly estimated, of the four basins where artesian water can be had is in the neighborhood of 2000 or 2500 square miles.

In addition to the study of the artesian basins referred to, Professor Russell's trip furnished much of interest in the way of general geology and geography, and especially in reference to the extinct volcanoes of Southeastern Oregon and the Cinder Butte in Idaho.

One of the greatest needs of the people in Idaho and Oregon, who are interested in putting down artesian wells, is detailed information as to how to drill and care for such wells. Of all the drill holes Professor Russell saw in the state referred to, he failed to remember a single instance in which the work was done right. In some instances, as near Burns the wells without doubt would have been highly successful had proper casing been put in, but are classed as failures; and in other instances wells which are now flowing have decreased in volume owing to caving in of their sides, so as to be practically useless.—Baker City Herald.

Railway Problems to be Discussed.

Minneapolis, Minn., Oct. 21.—The leading railway systems of the United States and Canada are represented at the annual meeting of the Association of Superintendents of Railway Bridges and Buildings, which began its sessions in this city today. The three days' program provides for the discussion of a wide range of questions affecting the particular branch of railway work with which the members of the association are identified.

AT FRAZER'S OPERA HOUSE.

Clara Mathes Company Plays to Crowded House—Good Play Tonight.

The Clara Mathes Company opened a week's engagement at Frazer's last night in "Among the Philippines." The company was greeted by a crowded house, where the notice of "standing room only" was posted at an early hour. The company sustained itself well and will receive another large audience tonight. The play will be entitled "In the Reign of the Emperor." The play is a good one and the cast is well adapted. There is not a lame place in the make-up of the company.

Miss Mathes will appear as Countess Castiglioni and will wear an opera cloak of great cost, which has only one counterpart in America. The other is owned by the wife of the British premier of Canada.

The company played all last week in La Grande and here is what the Chronicle has to say:

"The Clara Mathes Company closed a week's engagement at the opera house last evening, playing 'The Royal Spy' Saturday night and 'Sapho' last night. The house was crowded each night, and never before has a company given more general satisfaction in our city. Miss Mathes is indeed a star in her profession. The entire company is composed of people well suited to their parts. Miss Mathes was especially favored in 'Nell Gwynn,' 'The Royal Spy' and 'A Woman From Martinique.' This company will always have a hearty welcome in our city." Prices 20, 30 and 40 cents.

Kansas City Stock Show.

Kansas City, Mr., Oct. 18.—The American Royal Cattle and Swine Show, to be held in this city this week, has attracted thousands of breeders and lovers of pure-bred cattle from all sections of the West and Southwest. This year there is an added feature which makes the show of double interest to the rangers and ranchmen—a competition of car load lots of fat and feeding cattle. The competition includes both pure-bred and grade steers and heifers. Each of the four breeds participating in the show—the Herefords, Shorthorns, Galloways and Angus—has a contest of this kind, and then there is a contest of the prize winners of all breeds. Upwards of $20,000 in prizes has been hung up by the four breeds for breeding and feeding cattle. The exhibits already on the grounds include nearly 100 carload lots, besides 20,000 pure-bred breeding animals and 15,000 registered Poland-China, Berkshire and Durot-Jersey hogs.

NOT A RELIEF BUT A CURE

Helena, Mont., Oct. 4, 1902.
Dr. C. A. Ferrin,
Helena, Mont.
I wish to thank you for my relief. I was suffering agonies from piles and was taking morphine to relieve me, when, on the advice of a friend, I procured a bottle of your Ferrin Pile Specific and took a tablespoonful at night and another in the morning. At half past 12, noon, my wife gave me another tablespoonful, when my pain all stopped. In two days I was able to attend my regular business entirely relieved. It was simply wonderful.
Truly yours,
Julius Meyhoefer, Furrier,
Helena.
